Total Shutdown By Air Canada

Times News Services

Air Canada, beset by crippling nation-wide wildcat walkouts from a strife-ridden ground workers union, abruptly shut down all operations today for an indefinite period.

The last flights were 13 planes summoned home from Europe and jammed with travellers who had faced being stranded abroad in the peak summer travel period.

Air Canada president Claude Taylor, who had averted a pilots' walkout only 24 hours earlier, imposed the system-wide suspension before dawn in response to shotgun walkouts Thursday by members of the International Association of Machinists, disgruntled over a second tentative contract.

Prospects of early talks with the divided IAM were confused. A spokesman for the negotiating committee said a previously-scheduled meeting with the airline would proceed Saturday.

But the head of the Montreal local, where most of IAM's 7,500 membership is based, demanded the meeting be cancelled because the union negotiators had lost the confidence of union members.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association on Thursday began to mail ballots to 1,500 Air Canada pilots for a vote on a new contract settlement reached Wednesday.

The ballots are to be returned by Sept. 10 and the results will be announced later that month.

Airline spokesman Jim Standing said in Montreal that the airline was doing its best to make other travel arrangements for passengers booked on Air Canada flights, but "indications from airports across the country are most passengers heard the news and just stayed home."

CP Air spokesman Jim McKeachie said in Vancouver today the airline plans to run some extra flights during the overnight hours.

"We hope to operate some extra sessions on our transcontinental routes to supplement the nine regular cross-Canada flights each day," McKeachie said.

He said the airline's telephone lines were jammed and it had decided to temporarily waive the requirement for international travellers to reconfirm flights from Canada.

Meanwhile, Canada Post spokesman Ray Ducker said mail service in British Columbia will not be greatly affected by the Air Canada shutdown, because first class mail in the B.C. and Yukon district is not normally handled by the airline.

Steve Howe, spokesman for British Airways, said today that the airline will honor Air Canada tickets.

Howe said extra aircraft will not be put on the routes but seats still are available.

He asked that any Air Canada passengers wishing to travel with British Airways get their tickets revalidated before arriving at the airport.

Adding to the chaotic air travel situation, French air traffic controllers began an 11-day work-to-rule slowdown today as thousands of European and North American vacationers started journeys on one of the year's busiest travel weekends.

ELECTION FODDER - CLARK

More for Old, Less for Young

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government is reducing family allowances for 7.3 million children by more than a third to $20 monthly Jan. 1 but will bring in a tax credit plan for lower and middle-income families, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Thursday.

Chretien, in a hurried, budget-type statement, also said an income supplement paid to 1.3 million elderly pensioners will rise by $20 a month in January and steps will be taken to hold down increases in gasoline and oil prices.

The announcement, part of a series made recently on the heels of a nationally-televised speech by Prime Minister Trudeau Aug. 1, was quickly branded election fodder by Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

Clark, labelling the statement a continuation of a Liberal election campaign, said none of the measures were so urgent they could not have waited for the planned resumption of Parliament in October.

Ed Broadbent, the New Democratic Party leader, said in Hamilton the news conference at which the statement was released was "nothing more than a vivid illustration of the Liberal party's cynical and calculating manipulation of the people."

While welcoming the income increase for the elderly and tax credits to low income groups, Noble said there is little doubt the cutback in family allowance assistance will cost the provincial government.

All children in the care of the superintendant of child welfare such as those in foster homes are partly maintained by the monthly family allowance.

Noble said the only alternative to not making up the $8 difference provincially, would be to reduce their maintenance.

"I don't see how we can do that so it looks like an inevitable cost to the province."

Noble said he hadn't worked out how much the short-fall would be.

When asked if cutbacks in UIC might lead to more people going on provincial welfare, Noble said he wasn't yet sure what effects those cutbacks will have.

John Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, said the measures would be a "bitter pill" for middle-income Canadians. But he said he was pleased the government had taken a tough stand on issues that need to be dealt with.

The basic federally-paid allowance is now $25.68 per child a month and, through indexing to the cost of living, would have risen to $28 in January. Quebec and Alberta vary their allowances in accordance with an agreement

Chaos, Conflict For 90 Minutes

OTTAWA (CP) — An hour and a half of confusion, conflicting figures and strident questions from the press followed Finance Minister Jean Chretien's economic statement Thursday.

The problem was that the minister's six-page statement about cutting expenditures didn't appear to be saving the country any money at all.

Of the three major programs announced, one broke even and two represented net losses to the federal treasury.

Chretien told reporters his scheme for increased benefits to the elderly would cost $290 million, his child benefit scheme would break even and his decision not to increase oil prices as planned next January would mean a loss of revenue of $140 million and the government's decision to reduce the federal excise tax on gasoline by three cents-a-gallon would end up costing $165 million. The total loss came to $595 million.

"How can you pass this off as a spending reduction?" asked a perplexed reporter.

First Chretien told the reporter not to jump to any conclusions until he has unveiled his entire economic program. He promised a second statement within the next week or so.

A second questioner wanted to know how the government's final balance is supposed to look.

"I recognize there is increased spending in what I've announced tonight," Chretien said. "But some of it is not really spending at all. We do not lose money by offering tax credits. This is simply money we will not be collecting."

Finally, Chretien and his advisers came up with the following summary of the mathematics of Thursday's announcement. The net loss to the government would be $595 million but the net gain through changes in the unemployment insurance scheme would be $580 million.

"But what are you going to do to the unemployment insurance system? You haven't said anything about that, Mr. Minister."

"I am announcing a $580 million cost saving," Chretien said. "I'll have the details of it at a later date."

Unemployed 'Really 13%'

Times News Services

Unemployment in Canada is upwards of 13 per cent — far greater than figures reported by Statistics Canada — the National Council of Welfare says.

And today's unemployment is a mere taste of the crisis in jobs to come in the 1980s, Robert Bryce, former deputy minister of finance, said today.

"There is going to be inexorable pressure from the developing countries to find work for millions of their young people. That's what will strain the market system beyond anything we've seen yet," Bryce told delegates in Ottawa at a three-day conference on the future entitled Shaping the Future: Canada in the Global Society.

The welfare council, in a newly-released report, Working Together, says labor force statistics collected each month by federal government fail to count among the jobless those who, though willing and able to work, have become discouraged and stopped job-hunting.

The "hidden unemployed," many of them poor, unskilled and uneducated, swell the ranks of the jobless to one-and-a-half times the federally-published average of 8.6 per cent for the first six months of 1978, the council says.

The council is a Canada-wide citizens' body formed to advise health and welfare officials.

Bryce said he is not optimistic about Canada's ability to deal with the coming crisis when inflation will continue to strain the market system and domestic unemployment will remain unsolved.

Bryce said the market system on which the economy has been based for the last century faces the severest tests in its history in the next decade.

Roving roadblocks operated in the Greater Victoria area Wednesday and Thursday nights have netted police some of their biggest hauls of drinking drivers since the provincial government's Counter-Attack program began nearly a year ago.

Of 1,216 motorists stopped, 44 were found to have been drinking.

Police charged 10 with impaired driving. Three of the drivers were also charged with refusing to provide a breath sample.

In addition, police charged one motorist with driving while his licence was under suspension, three with violations of the Motor Vehicle Act, and one with a violation of the Liquor Control Licensing Act.

The roadblocks, using the government-sponsored BAT-van (Breath Analysis Testing Van), were in the Sidney-Colwood area Wednesday night when 526 vehicles were checked.

Thursday, officers concentrated more in the Colwood-Shawnigan Lake-Sooke areas where they stopped 690 vehicles.

Travel Agents Go Bonkers

Air Canada's totally grounded but Victoria travel agents are up in the air and cursing today as they desperately try again to reroute the flights of hundreds of travellers.

Block-long lineups of people waiting to make alternative arrangements faced travel agents this morning after the suspension of Air Canada operations was announced.

"We're going out of our minds," said Mike Sudal of Travel World.

He said the shutdown is causing tremendous disruptions within the airline industry, as panick-striken people cancel flights, rebook and cancel again.

"Nobody wins in these things, but the airlines are hurting the most," Sudal said.

Air Canada suspended operations after members of the International Association of Machinists walked out at airports in six cities last night.

The travel agencies say they weren't prepared for the possibility of a shutdown and that the threat of a pilots strike earlier in the week was nothing compared to the problems they face now.

A spokesman for BCAA Travel said it will be difficult getting people out of Victoria and estimated a lengthy wait before alternative bookings are available.

He said the company had asked people panicked earlier by the pilot strike threat to wait until the end of the week before making alternate arrangements and now everyone is trying to leave at once.

To people waiting for flights, the shutdown means possible long delays as travel agencies work overtime trying to find alternative flights. Most rerouting is taking place through the U.S.

Better Buy Gasoline Now

Service stations in the Greater Victoria area started today to cut gasoline prices in the wake of Finance Minister Jean Chretien's announcement Thursday night of an immediate three-cent cut in the gasoline excise tax.

But don't count on the lower prices staying around too long.

Next Wednesday the prices will go up again from four to five cents a gallon, averaging out about 1.2 cents a gallon more than Thursday's pump price.

Only a scattering of stations had made the price change this morning but all are expected to follow suit before the day is out.

Chretien said the cutback in the excise tax from 10 to seven cents a gallon will cover a three to four cent per gallon hike that will come into effect Sept. 1. That price rise results from an increase of $1 a barrel in crude oil price July 1.

The minister, however, said he would allow oil companies to charge an extra 1.2 cents a gallon to cover higher costs for transportation, marketing and refining.

The excise tax does not cover home-heating oil which is expected to rise next Wednesday by the full 4.2 cents.

Chretien said Thursday the government proposes to skip a similar increase in the price of crude oil scheduled for early next year which would have added a further 3.5 cents a gallon to consumer prices next March 1.

Hijacking or Hoax? TWA not Sure

GENEVA (AP) — The passengers and crew of a Trans World Airlines jetliner from New York left the plane safely here today after a mysterious seven-hour interlude that authorities said was either a hijacking or a hoax.

The incident began when someone dropped a list of demands into the lap of a sleeping stewardess.

The passengers walked off the Boeing 707 less than an hour before a 5:30 p.m. local time (9:30 a.m. PDT) deadline set by a person or persons calling themselves a "task force of revolutionary soldiers" demanding freedom for former Nazi deputy fuehrer Rudolf Hess, for Robert Kennedy's assassin Sirhan Sirhan and for five jailed Croatian hijackers.

Fontanet first said after the plane landed here that there were "several" hijackers. But he later said no one had seen a hijacker after the 19-page list of bizarre demands was dumped into the sleeping stewardess's lap.

"We would like to find out who placed the messages into the lap of the hostess," said Fontanet after the passengers were taken to a security section of the airport to undergo questioning.

The "task force" had threatened in a written message to blow up the plane by 5:30 p.m. by remote control if the demands were not met.

The demands directed the pilot to take the plane to Cointrin Airport here, the flight's original destination.

Airport officials said there was no reaction among the passengers when the pilot, apparently locked safely in the cockpit, announced over the intercom this afternoon that two negotiators were coming to the plane.

"There was no reaction so the two boarded the plane," one official said. "As things continued to remain quiet, the passengers were told to leave. There was no panicking."

"All 79 passengers and nine crew members are free," said airport spokesman Daniel Tesseyre. There was no word on whether "hijackers" had been apprehended. TWA officials in New York said there were 10 crew members.

Two blue buses took the passengers and crew to the airport terminal, and the airport was closed at 4:30 p.m., apparently as authorities prepared for the possible explosion of bombs said to have been placed in the plane's luggage hold.

Celery, Spuds Lead B.C. Food Price Dip

The price of food in B.C. dropped 1.24 per cent during the past month, the provincial agriculture ministry said Thursday.

The ministry's weekly purchase in Vancouver of a basket of food, consisting of 80 items from 15 food components, showed that the price dropped to $55.83 for the period to July 26 from $56.53 on June 28.

"The decrease is predominantly a result of relatively large declines in the fresh vegetables and beef components," the survey said.

The survey shows that the latest average basket price is 10.7 per cent higher than a year ago and 17 per cent higher than two years ago.

The report notes that fresh vegetables decreased 10.3 per cent over the previous four weeks, with the largest decline registered by celery and potatoes as local produce came on the market.

The fresh vegetable component is almost 25 per cent higher than a year ago, the survey says.

Fresh fruit dropped one per cent while beef declined 5.6 per cent mainly due to heavy promotion by the retail stores.

"Retail prices will remain higher for several months as cattle herds are rebuilt, and long-term significant price reductions are not expected until the early 1980s."

Beef prices are currently 31.5 per cent higher than they were a year ago "but from 1974 to 1977 beef prices actually saw no increases." Pork is up six per cent from a year ago.

Eggs dropped 1.3 per cent because of store promotions while cereals and breads increased because of higher prices for flour and breakfast cereals, the survey says.

He was riding double on a bicycle with a seven-year-old companion at the time.

WEATHER COOLS OFF FOREST FIRE THREAT

Cooler temperatures and rain during the past week have reduced the forest-fire danger ratings to low over most of B.C., says D. H. Owen, B.C. forest service protection officer.

He said in a press release Thursday that the over-all fire situation is well under control.

Owen added that there were 14 new fires during the week, and that of the 2,187 so far this year, 61 were still burning but were in the mopping-up stage.

Canada's Trade Picture Remains Red-and-White

OTTAWA (CP) — There was a $98-million trade deficit in July as both exports and imports rose from the previous month, preliminary figures from Statistics Canada show today.

Revised figures for June showed that the merchandise trade balance that month actually showed a surplus of $38 million. Preliminary figures had indicated a $93-million deficit, the first since November, 1976.

The value of exports in July was $4.04 billion, an increase from of 2.6 per cent from June.

Imports, however, increased faster at a rate of 6.1 per cent to $4.14 billion.

The relatively weak merchandise trade performance of the last two months contrasts with strong surpluses registered in the first five months of the year. Federal authorities were hoping those surpluses would help provide a major impetus for economic growth.

In the three months ending in April, for example, there was a singularly high surplus of $1.31 billion, Statistics Canada said. The total 1977 surplus in merchandise trade was $2.9 billion.

There were widespread declines in exports of a broad range of commodities in July, led by a substantial fall in shipments of metallic ores due to prolonged industrial disputes at the Quebec-Labrador iron mines.

Shipments of passenger vehicles and fertilizers were among the few exceptions to the trend.

On the import side, there was an increase of nearly 10 per cent in imports of passenger vehicles and automotive parts from the U.S. in July. That was partly offset by a decrease in imports of machinery, trucks and other equipment.

Imports from the U.S. were up 1.3 per cent to $2.93 billion. Imports from other countries, however, ballooned by 22.5 per cent to $1.22 billion and were led by unusually-large landings of crude oil.

U.S. Dollar Up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar edged up on the world's foreign exchanges today, aided by a report the United States is ready to draw on about $4.4 billion in credit from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to support the sagging U.S. currency.

The price of gold was lower.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 192.052 Japanese yen, the high point for the day, up from 191.65 yen at Thursday's close and a low of 189.20 yen earlier today.

The U.S. dollar closed Thursday in Montreal at $1.1392 in terms of Canadian funds, up 1-10.

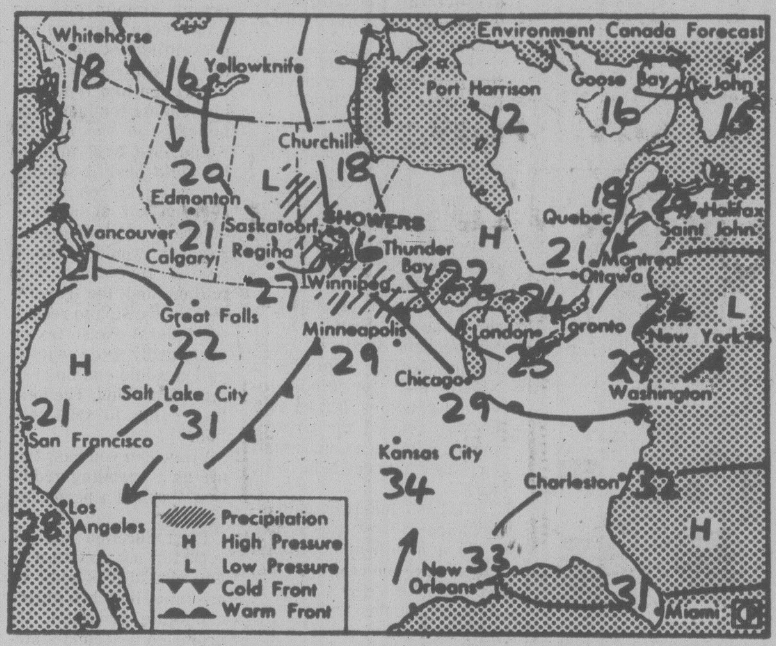

Map valid until noon Saturday

A large cold low pressure area remains off the west coast maintaining the unseasonably cool wet weather that the province has endured for the past two weeks. Bands of cloud spiralling around the low continue to produce intermittent showers and clear breaks and on Thursday evening one band resulted in an awesome display in the Lower Mainland. Characterized by the tubular streamers of grey cloud radiating out of its pitch black base the intense thundershower common in the Interior and in most parts of Canada is a somewhat rare phenomenon in Vancouver. Frequent flashes of lightning from cloud to ground were blurred by the pounding rain that accompanied it while the enormous electrical energy reached the ground repeatedly. Numerous power outages occurred as puny man-made electrical devices exploded under the assault of nature's incredible ionic avalanche. The end of the display was as serene as the beginning was violent as a crack in the sky between the cloud base and the horizon opened to reveal a crimson sphere which transformed the cloud from ominous grey to peaceful pink.

Rescuers Rap Police After Man's 12-Day Ordeal In High Arctic

Times News Services

TUKTOYAKTUK — A canoeist from Whitehorse, stranded for 12 days and presumed drowned by RCMP, was found alive and well earlier this week by two friends and an Inuit guide after a three-hour search.

Dr. Herbert Schwarz of Tuktoyaktuk and the canoeist, Jacques Moreau, say the RCMP conducted an inadequate search without calling on expert Inuit guides in the area for help.

When found Wednesday, Moreau's camp was surrounded by seven grizzly bears. He had survived a 15-minute immersion in Arctic water, an attack by a grizzly bear and had hiked about 150 kilometres in 11 days, eating nothing but rice until he killed a caribou the day before he was found.

Moreau, however, downplayed his experience. "The pain from the cold never bothered me," he said. "I was thinking about my canoe."

When he reached the shore, Moreau walked seven kilometres to his base camp, made a fire and dried his clothes.

The next day he started walking along the coast toward Paulatuk, an Inuit settlement about 225 kilometres away.

Along the way he was attacked by a grizzly bear which he shot. Later he killed a Caribou whose carcass attracted seven more grizzlies.

It was the next day that the rescue plane found him.

Moreau's canoe had floundered against ice floes on the high Arctic coast Aug. 12. His empty canoe was found Aug. 17 and an intensive air search was conducted Aug. 18 and 19.

Friends Bill Preston and Terry McCrory, both of Whitehorse, flew to Tuktoyaktuk Wednesday. They were told by RCMP that Moreau was presumed to have drowned.

The two men say they conferred with Inuit guide Vince Steen over the possible movements of Moreau based on where the canoe had been found.

The three chartered an aircraft and three hours later, flying south along the coast of Cape Bathurst about 600 kilometres west of Tuktoyaktuk, they spotted the 35-year-old adventurer.

Dr. Schwarz said the Inuit guide had offered his services to the RCMP, but the help was refused. "What this means is the abandoned search was totally and painfully inadequate," he said.

SECOND TEST-TUBE BABY DUE

LONDON (Reuter) — The second test-tube baby is expected early next year, a doctor who pioneered the technique said Thursday night and forecast the process would be widely available —and inexpensive — in two or three years.

Surgeon Patrick Steptoe appeared in a television interview in conjunction with the first showing of the birth of the original test tube baby, Louise Brown, last July 25.

Dr. Steptoe said Louise was doing well, gaining weight marvellously, and very beautiful.

Courting Disaster?

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fewer people are getting divorced but it's not necessarily because love is springing more eternal these days. One reason for the declining divorce rate is that fewer people are bothering to get married in the first place, attorney Herbert A. Glieberman, who has written two books about marriage and divorce, said Thursday.

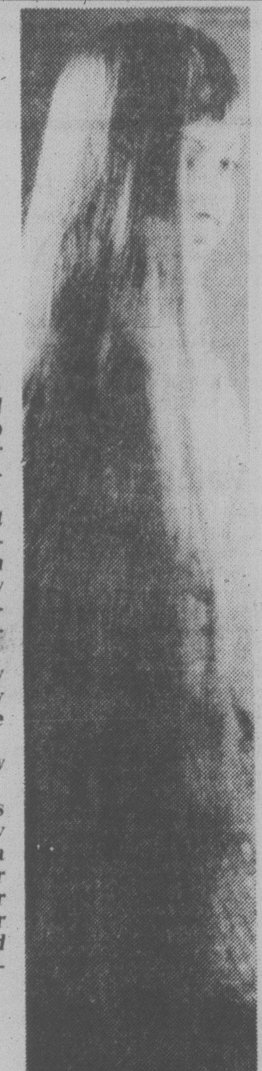
Somoza Ouster Demand In Managua Strike Call



A 20-year-old Toronto woman wants to sell her 58-inch tresses to help pay medical bills for her father who has lung cancer.

Marie, who asked that her last name not be revealed, said it has taken her nine years to grow her hair and she is prepared to sell it to a wigmaker.

"I don't know how much I will get for my hair or if it will be enough," she said.

"I don't even know whom to approach."

Marie said she was going to quit university two years ago to get a full-time job but her father did not want her to. She is a second-year sciences student and plans to become a medical missionary.

MANAGUA — President Anastasio Somoza's political opponents including the Chamber of Commerce and small businessmen called for a nation-wide strike today as "a gigantic step in the campaign to overthrow" the dictatorial Nicaraguan leader.

Somoza said the strike call was a plot by Sandinista guerrillas, who earlier this week stood off National Guard troops in a 44-hour siege at the National Palace, and by the opposition, "but in any case I wish the businessmen and the opposition lots of luck."

Somoza, whose family has controlled Nicaragua for more than 40 years, later blamed Cuba for the incident.

In Panama, the leader of the terrorist band, Eden Pastore, who used the code-name "Zero," denied he had received Cuban help.

"We didn't need help from anyone," said Pastore, brandishing an automatic rifle.

Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, who heads one of the few democratic governments in Latin America, called on the Organization of American States for a "cordial intervention" in Nicaragua "to seek a process of democratization and avert further useless bloodshed."

"No one has the right, no matter how powerful he is or how many weapons he has, to sacrifice the life of his nation," said Perez.

The 25 guerrillas of the Sandinista National Liberation Front who held hundreds of hostages in the National Palace for two days and the many political prisoners whose freedom they won arrived in Panama and asked for asylum. Diplomats said they are certain to get it.

The Red Cross said eight members of the national guard, Nicaragua's army, were killed in the guerrillas' invasion of the palace, and 15 other persons were wounded. One of the guerrillas arrived in Panama on a stretcher and was taken to hospital, but it was not learned whether he was wounded or ill.

Once their plane touched down, they were hustled to Tinajita, a National Guard outpost 10 miles from Panama City.

"We tried and we succeeded in striking a blow that shook the regime of the Somoza dictatorship," the only woman in the group, known as Commando 2, told reporters in Panama.

"Our fundamental objective was political though it is certain our action had military repercussions. We dealt a blow against the dictatorship and for the liberation of political prisoners."

She said the guerrillas were considering to return to Nicaragua to continue the struggle, but did not say when or under what circumstances.

Some experts trace the current unrest in Nicaragua to corrupt use of aid from around the world which flowed to the country after the devastating Managua earthquake in 1972. For details see the article on Page 27.

Largest U.S. Mail Union Rejects Contract

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An unofficial vote count early today showed the largest postal union in the U.S. has rejected a proposed three-year contract, posing the possibility of an illegal nation-wide mail strike, union sources said.

The unofficial tally showed the vote by the American Postal Workers Union to be 94,000 to 78,000 against the contract offer.

About 175,000 of the 280,000 union members were believed to have participated in the balloting.

By rejecting the offer of a 19.5 per cent wage and cost-of-living raise, the union representing postal clerks became the second postal union to defy President Carter's call for restraint in the negotiations — restraint that Carter said would help hold down inflation.

The vote by the APWU was considered a determining factor in chances for a strike. Leaders of both the APWU and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which earlier rejected the contract by a 4-3 margin, are now under pressure from rank-and-file members to reopen negotiations or set strike deadlines next week.

Neither Postmaster General William Bolger nor his top aides would say Thursday whether they will yield to union demands to return to the bargaining table.

Lethal Missile Fumes Leak Into Atmosphere

WICHITA (Reuter) — Deadly fumes that killed one missile crew member and injured six others continued to leak into the atmosphere near here today for the second day, a U.S. Air Force spokesman said.

The gas, nitrogen tetroxide, escaped when a valve apparently malfunctioned at a Titan II nuclear missile base 50 kilometres southeast of here, the spokesman said.

One crew member died Thursday from exposure to the caustic fumes. Two other fuel transfer crew members who were filling the intercontinental ballistic missile at the time of the accident were in serious condition.

The gas also forced aboout 150 residents in tiny communities of Udall and Rock to remain away from their homes Thursday night.

Reactions to the gas can range from mild to severe irritation to eyes, ears, nose, throat and skin to caustic burns and death. "It eats right through the skin into the system," the spokesman said.

Refurbish the Royal

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf's latest proposal for a massive renovation of the Royal Theatre sounds like the most sensible idea yet for the development of performing arts facilities in Greater Victoria.

Although Bawlf has not yet made any official approach to the three municipalities that own the Royal, he has apparently indicated to Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie that $400,000 of provincial money might be available if the municipalities were to increase substantially their program of renovations for the Edwardian building. Another $200,000 might also be found from federal funds, he suggested.

Put together with the $600,000 the three municipalities have already approved, this would provide a total of $1.2 million for the renovation program — quite enough to upgrade the Royal into a first-class theatre. Victoria then would have two excellent downtown performing arts centres (the McPherson being the other) as well as one at the university.

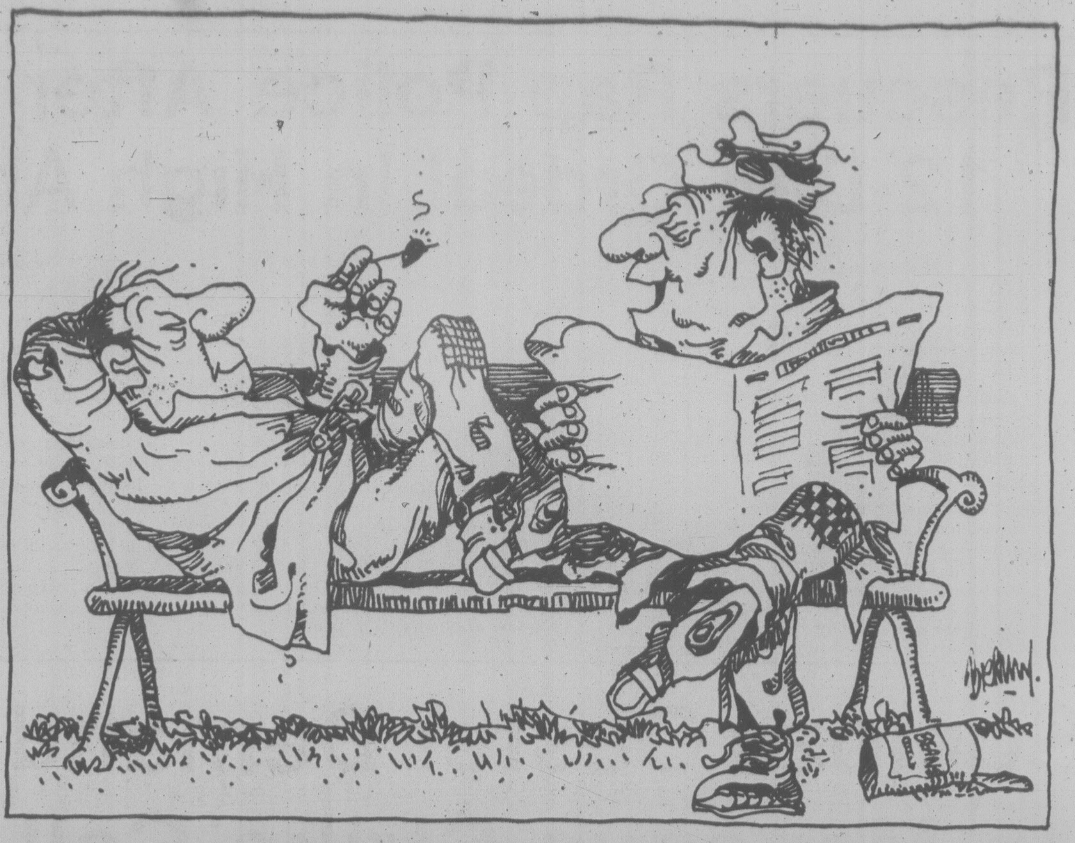
Surely this makes much more sense than building an entirely new performing arts complex, an idea that has drifted about Victoria and provincial circles for years. Bawlf is quite right when he says there is no apparent need for a new complex; arts groups are not shouting that there is no room for them.

Moreover, the revitalized Royal could always provide more stage time if required since it now is leased out for use as a movie theatre most of the time.

The other obvious advantage to the Royal proposal is that it will cost the taxpayers — local and provincial — so much less than would building an entire new complex. Although $1.2 million seems like a lot of money, it is probably not one-tenth the cost of a whole new facility.

The refurbishing should also allow the Royal to keep its delightful Edwardian character — a building that, from the tourists' viewpoint, is much more Victorian than any new brick-and-glass structure, however well-designed, would be.

The idea should be formalized quickly by Bawlf and adopted equally quickly by the theatre's municipal owners.



"... however, in Tokyo, the dollar closed at 192.10 yen, up from 191.6575 at Tuesday's close, while in New York the Canadian dollar was down 1/20th at $0.8779 and the pound sterling was down 3/4 at $1.9245 ..."

Investigating Accidents

The Canadian Bar Association has taken some well-deserved flak in the past few weeks for its constitutional proposals, but it should get much credit for its latest report — one on the problems in air and marine accident investigations.

The paper has been prepared by the air law section of the CBA and will be debated at the association's annual convention next week.

The report highlights the difficulties caused by the current practice of having the transport department act as detective, judge and jury in many accident investigations — even those in which it may also be playing the role of suspect.

It notes the government body can investigate an accident, produce its report, then find itself a party in a court case where liability may be decided largely on the basis of that same report. In what must be one of the legal understatements of the year, it notes, "there is a potential for a conflict of interest" in these circumstances.

Another potential problem seen is that some persons involved in accidents could be intimidated by being investigated by employees of the group that governs them. These people might withhold information, thus hampering investigations, or even causing them to come to erroneous conclusions.

The CBA committee's answer to this problem is a simple one: all the government needs to do, it says, is set up an independent accident investigation branch rather than having Transport Canada officials do the investigating. This would require no more bureaucracy since the current staff of investigators could simply be transferred directly to the new agency.

The new agency could report either directly to the minister of transport, or, to make it even more independent, directly to Parliament.

Such a change would be a giant step in ensuring that justice was seen to be done in the investigation of air and marine tragedies.

It is much to be hoped that the report is adopted, not only by the annual convention of the CBA, but also by the federal government.

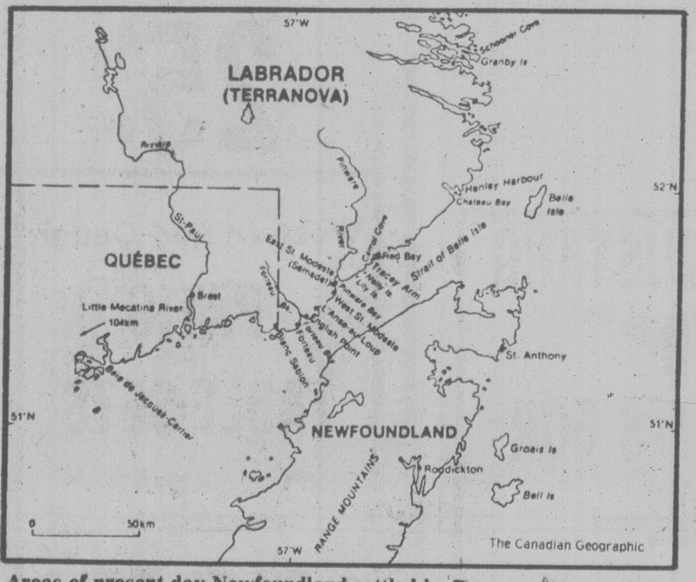
A New Page in Our History

RED BAY, Labrador — Most of the first documents written in Canada were written in neither of our official languages. They were written here by Basque whalers, as early as the 1570s, and probably far earlier. And they were written in Spanish, or in Basque.

A half century before the first French colonists came to New France or the first English settlers to Newfoundland, the Basques each year sailed their galleons to this protected, picture book harbor gouged out by a glacier along the forbidding, majestic shore at the easternmost tip of the North American mainland.

The Basques came not as settlers but as fishermen, in pursuit of the humpback and mink whales that streamed in thousands through the Belle Isle Strait. They stayed longer — early summer to December — than did their contemporaries, the cod fishermen from Portugal, Spain, France and England. And they came in greater numbers — perhaps 2,000, or as many as live here today.



The Canadian Geographic

Left Records

In one way, the Basques were unique. They left, as did no others among those long ago fishermen, an imperishable record of their presence.

For one thing, the Basques wrote about themselves. Unknown even to contemporary Spanish historians, this treasure-trove of records about Canada's earliest times was discovered, in an epic of solitary scholarship, by archivist Selma Barkham after a decade-long quest.

With a single-minded passion she probably inherited from her great grandfather Thomas Huxley, Barkham first came upon references to the Basque whalers of Labrador while researching the restoration of the French fortress of Louisburg in Cape Breton. She followed the trail to the Spanish colonial records in Mexico City. She found the source in the decaying, long forgotten clerical and legal archives in the seaports and hill towns of the Basques in northern Spain.

There, Barkham came upon the second oldest document known to have been actually written in Canada. (The earliest is the 1542 pardon, apparently signed at Cap Rouge by the French explorer Roberval on behalf of crew member Paul de Aussillion.) Barkham's find was Canada's first business transaction, recording the purchase of four shallops, or rowboats, by Joannes de Lecho in Chateau Bay near Red Bay, in 1572.

There as well, Barkham found Canada's first insurance policy claim, made by Miguel de Cerain in 1566 as recompense for damage done to his galleon when the sea in Red Bay suddenly, "froze like curds."

Barkham's most splendid discovery is of Canada's first will, composed "with as sound a mind as it has pleased Our Lord to give me", by Juan Martinez DeLarrume in 1577, in Buttes, as the Basques called Red Bay, in "La Provincia de Terranova". Martinez carefully itemized the masses to be said for his soul, the reals and ducats owed him, and then named his wife Ana "universal heir of all my goods".

Besides the documents they brought back, the Basques left behind in Labrador their own, unmistakable, calling cards. You can spot them as easily as I did, just by walking along the pebble beaches or by pulling aside the turf. As ballast for the outward voyage and as roofing for the cabins they built here, the Basques brought with them thousands of the familiar red, curved, ceramic tiles that you can see today everywhere in Spain, and, in fragments as out of place as an iceberg bumping against the Iberian coast, in Red Bay and half a dozen nearby Labrador coves.

The first dig for Basque remains was undertaken this summer by an archeological team from Newfoundland's Memorial University. Besides more broken tiles than can be counted, the team unearthed iron harpoon heads, lead shot, beans brought over for food, the stem and base of a wine glass, and the outline of an oven built by the Basques to boil down whale blubber for oil.

"The smoking gun we're looking for is a coin," archeologist Gerry Penney told me. "It would give us a definite date." A more dramatic discovery that the Memorial group hopes to make next year is the remains of two Basque galleons known, because of insurance records, to have sunk in Red Bay harbor.

The tantalizing question which may never be answered is whether the Basques predated John Cabot. As yet the earliest record of a Basque voyage to Labrador that Barkham has found is 1547, exactly a half century after Cabot went ashore somewhere in North America.

Scraps of Evidence

Two scraps of evidence suggest that the Basques were the first. Cabot's son Sebastian, a notorious liar unfortunately, stated that his father went where the Basques had already been. Further, the great maritime historian Samuel Eliot Morison puts Cabot's landfall at Quirpoon on Newfoundland's northern tip, a few miles away and directly across the strait from Red Bay. Coincidence? Or a canny navigator who knew where he was going?

Certainly, the Basques were here each summer and fall — at least once, trapped by freezeup, they wintered here — from the 1540s to the late 1580s. Then, the defeat of the Armada cost Spain its control of the seas, and the Basques their trans-Atlantic trade. As well, by then the whales may have been decimated.

Today, there are one-third as many people, about 300, in Red Bay as there once were Basques. The fishery this year was poor. One reason is that the whales are back, consuming the fish and on several days making it impossible for the fishermen to go out for fear their boats would be overturned. Banned for a decade to protect the species, Newfoundland's whale fishery soon will have to be resumed.

Myth and Ritual

The letter of W. Young, assistant chief forester, (Pine Beetle, Aug. 14), failed to address the significant issues revolving around the attempts of Forests Minister Tom Waterland to log the Akamina-Kishinena wilderness valley adjacent to Waterton and Glacier National Parks in southeastern British Columbia. The conduct of Mr. Waterland in this important wilderness-park issue should be a matter of public record, for it tells of events to come and is an example of his less-than-open public administration.

In November, 1977, the minister's staff proclaimed to the fish and wildlife branch, parks branch, ministry of environment, federal Parks Canada and the U. S. parks service that a "folio plan" had been developed to log the Akamina-Kishinena park reserve. (A folio plan in theory means full public and inter-government input prior to Mr. Waterland making an irrevocable land use decision.) This unilateral attempt at making a precedent setting land-use decision quite properly upset the public, with many government people outside Mr. Waterland's ministry balking at the high-handed attitude of the forest minister.

The Sierra Club requested an opportunity to review the Akamina folio plan. Instead, Mr. Waterland's staff denied public opportunity to review the written plan and make comment on the logging plan, preferring to send the matter to the provincial Environment and Land Use Committee (ELUC), composed of nine cabinet ministers.

No doubt the forest minister felt more confident in hiding the rationale for his logging plan behind the closed doors of cosy ELUC meetings. So much for public input into forest management. But perhaps we all should have taken Mr. Waterland more seriously when he recently announced a new partnership between his government and the forest industry. The public should not expect the right to know why the government makes decisions.

The minister of forests seems to prefer to make his decisions based on hearsay, myth and ritual. A public assessment and review of all the pertinent facts involved in major land-use decision is a more logical approach. However, Mr. W. Young (not to be confused with Ted Young, policy advisor to Waterland) is to be commended for refering to the beetle presence as an infestation, since in truth the beetle has resided in B.C. from before recorded history. Mr. Waterland, on the other hand as we have learned, permitted his staff to sow fear and undue amongst the other ministers on ELUC by terming the beetle presence an invasion from the U. S. which must quickly be eradicated by salvage logging.

Salvage logging for mountain pine beetle doesn't control the infestation. The strategy must be a distribution of age classes of trees on the warmer growing sites where beetle infestation risks are much higher. The Akamina-Kishinena park reserve is not a high risk area, according to literature published by the Canadian Forest Service. The beetle has a cycle of about seven years with populations reaching a high once during this time. Cumulative mortality may be as high as 40 per cent in high risk areas far outside the Akamina valley.

Is it too much to ask of Mr. Waterland that the public see his facts, in writing? With all the resource conflicts in the Akamina park reserve, is it too much to ask Waterland that he show the public that he is practising excellent forestry already on all economically operative infested timber in less environmentally sensitive areas beyond the borders of Akamina?

The "next-year-is-always-brighter, just-trust-us" sydnrome is too often used by the minister of forests. Saying that the "long-term future looks bright where (and when) interior lodgepole pine second-growth forests will be grown" must be challenged, for there are many false myths about the prosperity that will come if only the public will let the forest industry liquidate the remaining old-growth and then wait patiently for "second growth."

Tell us Mr. Waterland, is it improper for the public to demand of its forest minister an accurate representation of the facts, presented through a public assessment and review forum where reason and common sense can separate the facts from myth and ritual? — Robert W. Nixon, Regional Conservation Representative, Western Canada Chapter of the Sierra Club.

Unchanging Values

Once again the Queen's presence among us has stirred the hearts of a multitude of Canadians and never in recent years has loyalty to the Crown been more evident. There are however powerful elements in the country that would replace the monarchy with a republican form of government.

The prime minister was gracious in what he said at the state dinner in Edmonton, but can we believe his expression of loyalty and respect? Two years ago he said publicly in Quebec: "If one of these days we abolish the monarchy she will not be head of state any more. It will be someone I appoint." His pirouette behind Her Majesty's back while her guest in London was insolence that no responsible person would show to the head of state of a banana republic. Clearly he is a republican at heart who does not enjoy the parliamentary form of government.

Are we actually less free, less Canadian because we have the Queen? Senator Eugene Forsey, thank goodness, is on the warpath and is going to explain why we are, in fact, more free, not less.

It is of course illogical for our head of state to be neither Canadian nor resident in Canada and this frustrates logical, sophisticated people like Allan Fotheringham and members of the bar. But was it logical to build the CPR and thus make possible a Canadian nation? A recent writer in Le Devoir cannot understand why so many English-Canadians are in contrast to French-Canadians, whose loyalties are rooted entirely in this country. I understand his feelings, but what about the people on the street who had just seen the Queen and who told the CBC that she made them feel proud to be Canadian? What about the people of Vegreville, Alberta, and the welcome they gave her? They are not "British."

It is easy to become heated when faced with a kind of undercover nibbling. But there are also sincere and deeply felt differences and it is as wrong to call those who question the monarchy "traitors" as it is to say that monarchists are not true Canadians.

We who believe in the monarchy feel the more deeply for Canada because our head of state embodies in her person a conception of leadership based entirely on service. Someone in Saskatchewan put it well when she said that in this world of violence and change the Queen stands for unchanging values, and she loves her for it. Those of us who feel as she does should speak out. — Paul Nanton, 3765 Cadboro Bay Road.

Not Spectacular

I would like to take exception to the language used by the Times in reporting automobile accidents. In at least three cases in the past few months the word "spectacular" has been used to describe such happenings. In view of the destruction of property, and probably also of human life in accidents of such magnitude, the word is coldhearted to say the least. It stresses only the visual impact of the occurrence, and is extremely inconsiderate of the feelings of relatives and friends of those involved in an accident. "Very serious" or "severe" would be more appropriate adjectives. "Boy, you should have seen this one" is the message that comes across, as if accidents are to be rated on their entertainment value. Your reporters have been watching too many cartoons. — Virginia Careless, 1673 Earlston Avenue.

Public Service

In the Times of Aug. 18 I saw an announcement that the counters at the main post office in Victoria would in future only be open from Monday to Friday. Apart from delaying our mail even more than at present, this action may well set the pace for other public service people.

We all know now that we must not get sick over the weekends, but what happens when, first the telephones, then the electricity, will only operate from Monday through Friday?

Next, I suppose, there won't be any firemen or policemen available on Saturdays and Sundays! With no public service personnel around over the weekends, I can foresee a bleak future when we all have to go to bed on Friday nights, pull the coverlets over our heads and only emerge on Monday mornings!

I am wondering what the words: Public Service are supposed to mean. — R. G. Napier, 80 King George Terrace.

Playing Games

It is manifestly absurd for one man, no matter how eminent, to be able to choose the date of a federal election in order to meet his own, or his party's, convenience. Mr. Trudeau is using that power to play games with the electorate and throw his opposition off balance by making it look as though there is going to be an election and then at the last moment deciding against having one.

The present rule that more than five years cannot elapse between elections is a good one. Also the right of the cabinet to dissolve Parliament at an earlier date should be retained but only when a vote of non-confidence in the government has been carried by the House of Commons. This will still allow the election whenever the government is repudiated but it would no longer be permitted at the whim of a self-interested individual. The present arrangement simply adds to the odds against an opposition ever winning which is grossly unfair to all but the government party. — F.L.P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Devil They Know

The conservationist's basic aim is the preservation or conservation of the human species. For without this, there is no need or sense in worrying about anything else; whether it be conserved or consumed. If man is consumed, what is left?

Why is this so difficult for some people to grasp? It matters not what we think about anything if we are unable to survive. All other discussions and worries are frivolous, pointless, cleverly-designed smokescreens.

It is because of the dreams of the young that their elders find it obligatory to point out the problems and obstacles in the way of their dreams and try to find solutions for them by this very method. Hopefully, they will come up with some new thinking and some solutions of their own. "Better the devil you know, than the devil you don't."

A dream is a vision of what might be. A vision is a mental picture of what appears to be. Therefore the older and wiser visionaries are in a position to know the devil better. If the young are not shown the form of the devil in as clear a light as possible and the old are too late or too feeble to destroy it, there is no point in the young dreaming at all. For if they can't learn to see visions first, they will never be able to dream dreams tht have any chance at all of ever coming true. — Joan Bittorf, 1073 Davie Street.

How TV 'Mauls and Bleeds' the Language

By HENRY FAIRLIE
Washington Post

Perhaps it is mildly surprising that the best article on language that I have read for a long time appeared in the June issue of a journal called Hospital Practice; and only a little less surprising that it should be written by Harold J. Morowitz, professor of molecular biophysics and biochemistry at Yale University.

He recalls the advice of his fourth grade teacher, Miss Martin: "When you come across a new word, look it up, and then use it three times, until you are absolutely sure that you understand it." Two years ago, Morowitz encountered the word "propaedeutic," looked it up, discovered that it meant "a subject or study which forms an introduction to an art or science or to a more advanced subject generally," and, finding it useful, determined to follow Miss Martin's advice.

He first tried to use it by calling his forthcoming book "Propaedeutics of Bioenergetics" — could a title, I ask you, be more euphonious? — but when he tested it on two friends over dinner they grew irate that he should use a word unknown to them. Reluctantly and with apologies to Miss Martin, he renamed his book "Foundations of Bioenergetics," which does not mean quite the same. First strike against Morowitz.

But he was still intrigued by the response of intelligent people to a word they had not heard before. So he tried it out in a talk to a conference of scientists, but "they coughed considerably and sputtered a bit." Second strike against Morowitz.

He then used it in a magazine article, to describe certain kinds of 19th century research, but the editors crossed it out, on the ground that three of them in the office did not know it, and that therefore the readers would not know it either. They substituted the word "seminal." Third strike against Morowitz. He "kept wondering how the readers were going to increase their vocabularies beyond that of the editors if they never saw a word that the staff didn't already know."

In conclusion he advised those who did not like his use of propaedeutic "to be more receptive to new knowledge, lest you spend your declining years sitting around doing nothing but engaging in omphaloskepsis." He had got me there. Ah, bliss! I rushed to the dictionary. I will not spoil your own amusement or instruction by telling you the meaning of "omphaloskepsis" — it is really a whole sentence in a word — but will merely say that it could be used with effect to describe many attitudes in society today.

I happened to read Morowitz's lament while I was appearing on various talk shows around the country. I found it impossible to bridge the two worlds: the professor of biophysics and biochemistry, only a scientist, who tries to make language strong and vivid, and the interrogators on the talk shows, supposed to be communicators, who do not really use language at all.

I have always tried to avoid blaming television for our ills, believing that it is a symptom rather than a cause, but whenever I get close to it I am convinced that it is the real debaser of our language. It is television that mauls and bleeds it. Like a crocodile that stuffs its prey under the bank until it rots, then returns to devour it, television makes our language rot, until there is only the decomposed carcass that it is able to use. We rot with it, and do not protest.

Watching a talk show may not be instructive; appearing on one is a lesson in the death of culture. No need to read The Decline of the West; here one can experience it first-hand. I try to appear on them as little as possible. But "we authors, Ma'am," as Disraeli slyly said to Queen Victoria, get pushed into them. Authors are like jellyfish when it comes to promoting their wares. I never take part in a talk show without reeling and stumbling from the studio, like some blinded Samson, feeling that I have crossed the borderline between unreality and total insanity.

"That sounds very good," says the producer of "Morning Exchange," calling me from Cleveland, when I have outlined the points I would like to make. "But try not to mention people like Darwin and Marx and Freud. Not that our audience is not intelligent!" If not these, whom can one mention?

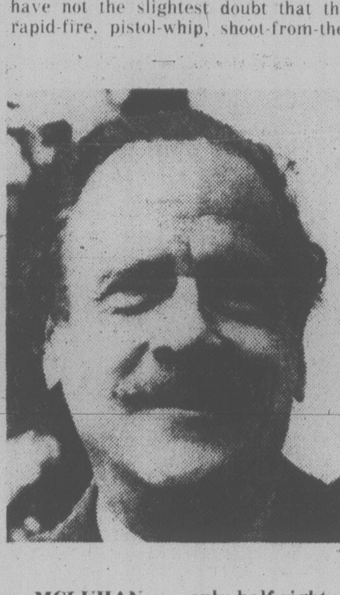
One is ushered into the studio. It does not matter whether it is in Washington or London, Chicago or Los Angeles, the set is always what might be called "Late Furniture Warehouse Sale Post-Functional." Years and oceans apart — I first did this sort of thing on one of the early David Frost shows on the BBC in London — everything has a "marked down" look. Sometimes behind one's head there are shelves of books bound in morocco leather. I reach down to take one down, and almost pull down the bookcase. They are not books at all, but only imitations of their covers, glued to the shelves. So it is show biz, and one has agreed to take part, but it is unnerving.

We are introduced to our interrogators, who of course call themselves "hosts." They are not hosts at all — a word rich in associations of friendship — but the word must bite the dust. Since they think of themselves as hosts, they call us their "guests," but we are not treated and do not behave as guests, and this honest word also must bite the dust.

You may think that these are small matters but, if we cannot keep good words like these for their honest occasions, we will end with no honest occasions at all.

"Welcome to another hour of good conversation," says Irv Kupcinet of "Kup's Show" in Chicago. One cringes in one's warehouse-sale armchair. For what we are about to participate in and what the viewers are about to see, bears not the slightest resemblance to conversation.

I have not the slightest doubt that the mistaken idea that people talk on a talk show is making it more difficult for people to talk in their real lives, just as I have not the slightest doubt that the rapid-fire, pistol-whip, shoot-from-the-hip way of talking on "Sixty Minutes," which of course accounts for its popularity, alters our idea of what reporting is and should be. Marshall McLuhan was only half right. The point is not that visual images are replacing verbal language, but that we are left thinking that we still use words, when in fact we have no verbal language left at all.



MCLUHAN . . . only half right

If you think that I exaggerate, test this by your own experience. Ever since television began to go on the streets to get the instant opinions of the multitude — "Sixty Seconds of Vox Pop," as the irreverent producers of BBC News call it — everyone in ordinary conversation is ready with instant opinions about everything under the sun. And if you still do not believe me, read the correspondence columns in a newspaper, and see how they differ from the Vox Pop on television. Television puts us out of our minds.

But it is when one is in the studio on a talk show that one most unbearably realizes what is happening. It is not merely that everything that one was invited to talk about is trivialized, but that it is usually impossible to make head or tail of anything that one is asked. Twice on "Kup's Show" I was asked questions that rendered me speechless — something which my friends will vouch is unhappily rare — and the cause of my speechlessness was that the questions made no sense. They could not be parsed.

A word like omphaloskepsis is not all that peculiar when one gets used to it. Beatrix Potter wrote stories to be read aloud to children from about the age of 18 months. In one of her books she describes how Peter Rabbit — or was it Benjamin Bunny? — ate too many of Mr. MacGregor's lettuces, and suddenly felt very "soporific." Is the child alarmed by such a long new word? Far from it, it is fascinated. When one thought it was not listening, it looks up. "Wha-a-tsh shoff-or-ippic?"

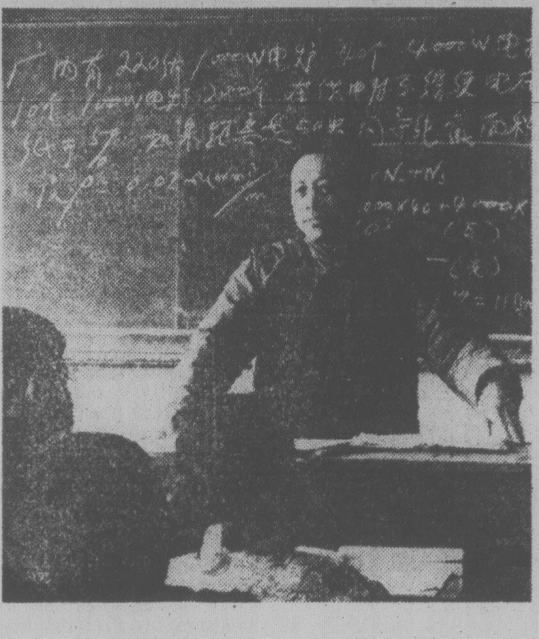
One explains that it is kind of sleepy but a little different from sleepy. The child just turns back to the picture, but the next night it waits for the word. "Whe-e-re's shoff-or-ipic?" One points it out on the page, and the child gazes in rapture. What it sees, one does not know. What can that line of symbols mean to it? Yet it traces them with its finger. At no moment in one's life will one be more aware that words are worlds to enter than when one watches a child enter a sound.

The following night it waits in ambush and, before one can utter the word, it says triumphantly: "Shoff-or-ippic." Its next step is to turn this magic new word to its own advantage. A few days later, asked to do something, it flops on the floor, and says through half-open and watchful eyes, "I'm feeling shofforippic." With the cunning but inexperience of childhood, it then has the nerve to repeat its lie. "I'm feeling sop-or-ific." It has pronounced the word correctly. It knew it all along.

A hidden smile just breaks across its face, which says, "I forgive myself," and, damn it, what can one do but forgive it. But there is something one knows. Give a child a word like soporific, and it will not later fall prey to omphaloskepsis. It has heard the sound of words as it would not have heard it in "sleepy." Everyone can be sleepy, but only it is soporific. What a proper propaedeutic to the art and science of life, or, for that matter, to any more advanced subject generally. Generally.

China 'Gambles' on Students

By JOHN FRASER



A bold attempt to speed up technology

PEKING — China's historic decision to immediately send its brightest students abroad in an attempt to speed up mastery of advanced technology, science and methodology represents one of the most stunning initiatives ever taken by this country in its recent past.

Although the Chinese public has not yet been told what is up, more details of the request have begun to emerge. Canada, for example, has been formally asked to take as many as 500 students on undergraduate, graduate and post-doctoral levels this year alone. Other countries approached to take the same figure included Britain, Japan, France, West Germany and Australia. Some European countries like Italy were asked to make room for as many as they could manage, while Romania and Yugoslavia — both soft-line Communist nations — were the only ideological partners included in the program.

Bed and board

It has also been learned that the Chinese have asked several U.S. universities — including Stanford — to accept an unspecified number of students. These universities were approached directly by the Chinese, rather than through the U.S. government.

The Chinese are proposing to pay the full "primary" expenses of this education, which would include transportation to and from the countries concerned, university tuition, and bed and board in normal university housing. There are, of course, hidden costs in education and the solution to this problem has not yet been arrived at and probably won't be until the number of students to be accepted is decided upon.

Those hidden costs are primarily bound up in the degree of subsidization the various Western governments contribute to higher education. In Canada, it has been estimated that tuition fees cover only one-fifth of the cost of educating a student and it is not clear yet whether or not the Chinese will be expected to pay the full bill if the Canadian government agrees to co-operate. Since education in Canada is a provincial responsibility, there will have to be considerable co-ordination between two levels of government.

Reliable diplomatic sources indicate that the average sum the Chinese are counting on having to pay per student is around five thousand U.S. dollars a year, exclusive of any transportation costs to and from the countries. If the Chinese place as many students abroad as they hope to, this means that within two to three years 10,000 students will be gobbling up $50 million at least.

That is a lot of money for a poor country which strives mightily for every cent of foreign capital it can get, particularly at a time when it is making huge foreign currency expenditures to modernize its industry, agriculture and armed forces. Still, as one Western ambassador put it, the Chinese have obviously decided that the benefits which could accrue from this plan so outweigh any possible drawbacks that the country can't afford not to do it.

Those are not inconsiderable. They include possible student defections, the introduction of highly antagonistic and disputatious theories into Chinese political and social life and — perhaps the most serious problem of all — the disaffection and opposition among Communist hardliners at home.

There are also a few dilemmas for the West to consider and which have been raised by diplomats here who, while not unsympathetic to China in general terms, nevertheless express concern at the degree with which Western countries are vying with each other to get on the new Chinese bandwagon. This is a country, they say, whose ways and means and goals remain essentially opposed to Western traditions of freedom of thought, action and enterprise.

In helping the Chinese, the West could be setting up a situation dangerous to its future stability and prosperity. More specifically, these Western opponents argue that precedent shows the benefits will all go one way — to China. In a previous exchange with Soviet academic institutions during the fifties, the countries certainly didn't draw closer together.

At the moment, however, it is difficult to accept that argument in any other context but the old "yellow peril" theory, updated for the times. It is the Chinese government that is assuming the most risk. Never before has the Communist government here (or anywhere else for that matter) made such an overt approach to the West for help, thereby admitting its own shortcomings. The gamble is enormous. In a very real sense, the government has placed an important part of its future prospects in Western hands. If the situation in China remains stable over the next decade, the returning graduates will inevitably form an elite corps that will profoundly affect Chinese life.

Low priority?

The West is being offered a unique chance to make a significant contribution to such changes, but there are already indications that some of the countries approached by the Chinese — including Canada — may place the education of Chinese students on a low priority because of general economic woes in education which may get worse with projected spending cuts. This situation, coupled with Western fears of possible subsequent repercussions, could scuttle the Chinese request for help. If this happens, then the West could be properly accused of rejecting the challenge of the future because of the uncertainty of the moment.

Tourist Hordes Anger British

By PETER DEELEY
London Observer

The traditional British welcome for the eight million foreign visitors who flock here annually has cooled this year.

For the past month the columns of London's Evening Standard have been brimming over with complaints by locals about the sheer impossibility of life in the capital during the peak of the holiday season — and with almost as many replies from tourists who feel they are tolerated in Britain these days only because of the money they bring in to bolster an uneasy economy.

Playwright John Osborne led the attack on what he called "this human garbage". He said London had become a "clip ghetto" overflowing with the deluge of The Visitor from Abroad (his emphasis) and urged other Britons to insult the tourists so that they would not return.

His advice seems to have been taken to heart. One of the most popular badges seen on the London underground system this summer bears the motto "Don't Blame Me: I Live Here."

A well-known columnist tells the story of his un-favorite encounter with a jeans-clad German youth. In Central London he was asked, "Where is Hyde Park (one of the West End's largest recreation areas)?"

The columnist relates that while he was trying to work out the directions, the youth repeated the question in a more hostile tone. The columnist then pointed to the nearby British Broadcasting Corporation building and told the visitor: "Go inside, take the lift to the sixth floor and you'll find it there."

Every London has his own pet grumble about the annual invasion. Those, for instance, who work near the Australian High Commission buildings in the West End can never get a parking place because every spot has been taken over by Australians trying to sell the camping vans in which they have been touring the world.

By the time computer-controlled parking summonses are issued, they are safely out of the way in Australia.

Then there are the pavement queues that litter the streets around the air terminal in Victoria. Day after day — and all night too — the visitors stretch out in their hundreds in sleeping bags, tents, even makeshift "homes" of wood and cardboard, waiting in line for cut-price airline tickets back to America.

Local residents have been long and loud in their complaints, but the police turn a blind eye to the obstruction. One couple who live right in the middle of this scene of human squalor described how they were woken up in the middle of the night by two teenagers seeking a bed out of the rain. They said they were quite willing to sleep in the bath if there was nowhere else.

Despite the importance of tourism to the economy, the government can do nothing to halt the "Be Rude" campaign. But is has acted against tourist rip-offs.

An attempt has been made to control prices at streetside hamburger and coffee stalls after it was discovered that tourists were being asked up to $1.80 for a hotdog. And there are still stories of non-English speaking visitors being taken literally for a ride by taxi drivers who overcharge them by about 1,000 per cent on five-mile journeys.

But perhaps the last words on the modern-day "seige of London" belong to two people prompted to write to the Evening Standard after John Osborne's tirade.

Anne Langley wrote from Central London: "Often I feel frightened and bewildered as marching hordes (of tourists) push me off the pavement and out of bus queues . . . There are just too many of them and it is their tragedy as well as ours that the London they want to see is almost obliterated."

And an Australian, William Brown, wrote from Melbourne: "So what is so ghastly about eight million tourists coming to dirty old London? . . . you should all be down on your knees thanking us for coming . . . I'll go to Hong Kong in future."

Think taste.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market reversed a mid-session decline to rise fractionally in active mid-afternoon trading.

The TSE 300 index edged up 0.4 to 1,234.15, encouraged by a two-point advance at New York.

Dome Petroleum Ltd. climbed 2¼ to $75¼ on the sale of 36,126 shares following its announcement that indications of hydrocarbon zones have been found during deepening of a Beaufort Sea well.

Westburne International gained 1¼ to $37, Canadian Pacific Investments ⅞ to $23¾, Maritime Electric A ¾ to $12½ and Simcoe Erie Investors ¾ to $8½.

Home Oil A dropped 1 to $41½, Home Oil B 1 to $39, Canadian Tire A ⅞ to $26⅜, Crush International ⅝ to $12⅞ and Pacific Petroleums ⅝ to $37⅝.

Canada Tungsten Mining rose ¾ to $20½, Cyprus Anvil Mining ¼ to $8⅞ and Teck Corp. B ¼ to $7¼. Conwest Exploration slipped ¼ to $6¾ and Kerr Addison Mines A ⅛ to $13¾.

Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum advanced 1 to $37½, Ranger Oil Canada ¾ to $18 and Trinity Resources 45 cents to $4.50. PanCanadian Petroleum declined 1⅛ to $35½ and Ocelot Industries B 1 to $14.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market climbed on moderate trading volume today showing little response to statements about the dollar and inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which was off a fraction in early trading, recovered to post a gain of 1.99 to 899.34 by 2 p.m.

Overall gaining issues outnumber losers by a 7-to-6 margin.

In response to a published report, Assistant Treasury Secretary Fred Bergsten said the United States was considering using its International Monetary Fund reserve resources to support the dollar but had reached no policy decision and was also considering other steps. The dollar has fallen steeply against major world currencies on foreign exchange markets in recent weeks.

Ramada Inn, up ¾ to $10¼, topped the NYSE most active list as of 2 p.m.

Other actively traded issues included Pan American, down ⅜ to $8½; Flintkote, off 2¾ to $36½; and Winnebago up ⅞ to $6⅛.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Heavy-volume issues achieved marginal early gains but declined suddenly in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. F.C.A. International moved up 10 cents to $3.10 and Northern Telecom 1 to $36⅝, following the latter firm's declaration Thursday of a regular quarterly dividend of 18 cents a share. Aquitaine Canada lost ¼ to $19¾, Shell Canada ¼ to $15, Imperial Oil A ⅛ to $21¾, Simpsons Sears ⅛ to $7½, Massey-Ferguson ⅛ to $11⅜, Canadian Cellulose ¼ to $8 and Pacific Petroleums 1½ to $37. Among speculative issues, Dynamic Mining Exploration rose three cents to $1.45 on a turnover of 16,200 shares.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices moved moderately higher near the close of light trading on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 3.8 to 513.1 an hour before the close. Leading industrials and oil issues gained, while gold stocks declined with the drop in the international bullion price. Canadian shares softened.

Engineers Healthy

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Unemployment among Canada's professional engineers is low despite a rush of foreign engineers into the country, M.N. Patterson, president of the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, reports.

"Latest figures show that actual unemployment among professional engineers in Canada now stands at 0.5 per cent, which is pretty well an irreducable minimum," he said in a speech to a service club.

The jobless figure for Ontario is 0.45 per cent.

He said a recent study shows that imports of engineers in research and development "have increased substantially."

Financing Aid Push For Small Business

TORONTO (CP) — William Kurchak, 33-year-old Toronto business consultant and former economics lecturer, has initiated Business Warriors to help struggling small businesses obtain hard-to-get financing.

Kurchak said he does not want passive members for his Warriors, a non-profit group that will act as a lobby to get the big banks to provide more help to small, independent business.

Membership fee to join the Warriors is $100 a year, but Kurchak said he only wants small businessmen who are willing to exchange ideas and join actively in the organization.

A business consultant for the last 12 years, Kurchak was an economics lecturer at York University. He and a small staff operate from a single office in downtown Clarence Square.

Kurchak said the first task of the Warriors is to improve on banking services for the small business community, and then to generate self-help programs for them.

He called on the banks to begin a program to improve relations with small businessmen. He said banks should establish a classification system to properly identify the branches qualified to deal with the borrowing needs of small businessmen.

The also should establish small business loan officers, and lengthen the term of service in communities of managers and officers who deal exclusively with small businesses.

Kurchak also is seeking a greater exchange of ideas between banks and small business customers, perhaps with some small businessmen sitting on bank boards.

Although major banks claim they are anxious to help the independent businessman, Kurchak said they "do not do so equally."

He plans to issue ratings on bank performance relative to the small businessman.

Currently, his view is that the Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal do the best job in this area.

Wardair Planning Shift to Toronto

EDMONTON (CP) — Wardair Ltd.'s $6-million maintenance and engineering base at Edmonton International Airport is being downgraded as the company moves to consolidate its maintenance, engineering and overhaul expertise at Toronto, a company official say.

Stung by first-half 1978 losses of $2.5 million, the company is citing the lack of more liberal charter regulations and federal intransigence in granting Wardair a domestic advanced booking charter licence as reasons for the move.

The action is expected to save the company $1 million.

Executive Vice-President Tom Spalding said the company hopes to transfer at least 70 key personnel to Toronto by November.

"We've been running two maintenance bases in effect, expecting domestic ABCs (advanced booking charters) and liberal charter rules."

Some routine maintenance will still be done here, he said, but the bulk of it will move to Toronto.

The move is not permanent, he said.

"I see this lasting two to four years, until we get things sorted out."

Ruralize Teaching: McGeer

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Thursday the solution to the problem of finding people willing to teach in rural areas lies in expanding teacher-training programs in isolated areas and the recruitment of potential teachers from those areas.

McGeer said there should be a balance in the admission of teacher-training candidates, recognizing that a preference in life style is a factor in professional choice.

He said if universities are not producing enough teachers willing to teach in the rural areas, they should change their balance in admissions so more people from rural areas are admitted.

"We must recognize that it has been traditionally much easier for a person in metropolitan Victoria or Vancouver to get a university education than somebody who lives in rural parts of the province.

"There has been discrimination, in a way, against them — not intentional but latent — because of the location of the institutions."

Disneyland PR Growl For Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police departments in this area have a new method of training — they are sending officers to Disneyland to learn how to behave like bears.

Police spokesmen said that, on the surface, a police officer in a 2.3-metre bear costume would be funny — but there is a grisly purpose to the antics of the costumed policeman.

He will tour schools with a uniformed officer to discuss the bare facts of shoplifting, vandalism and situations in which children are exposed to danger.

The Disneyland bear-training program for the officers is being paid for by the British Columbia Police Commission.

U.K. CLIMBERS HAVE 'HEADS IN CLOUDS'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four mountain climbers from Cambridge University are claiming to be the first to scale 12 mountains in northern British Columbia, but a provincial official thinks they have their heads in the clouds.

"If you look around carefully enough you can find a rusty sardine can on the top of every mountain in B.C.," Ernie McMinn, director of surveys and mapping, said Wednesday.

"Prospectors have prowled over every inch of this province and I doubt that there's anywhere that they haven't been for a second, third or even fourth look."

The leader of the British climbing expedition, Chris Dickinson, 22, said the four members of the group, which included David Thomas, 25, Jenny Williams, 23, and Patricia Langhorne, 23, were dropped at a lake near Lava Forks in the Cassiar district north of Stewart.

He said their float plane made the first recorded landing on the lake.

McMinn said that he does not think that there are any lakes in the province that haven't been landed on, "unless they are so small that they could get the plane in, but then couldn't get it out."

The expedition returned to England on Wednesday.

Hospitals Say Pact Won't Settle Strife

VANCOUVER (CP) — A controversial arbitration award covering 110 public hospitals is a dangerous non-decision that should be overturned, lawyer Duncan Shaw argued Thursday in B.C. Supreme Court chambers.

Shaw, representing the hospitals' bargaining organization, said that there is no finality and too much uncertainty in arbitration board chairman Allan Hope's award for a three-year contract with the Hospital Employees Union (HEU).

He asked Justice George Murray to find the award invalid on the grounds that the arbitration board failed in its duty to resolve all the issues. Union lawyer Raymond Cocking argued that the court has no jurisdiction to rule on the matter.

Shaw said his client, the Health Labor Relation Association (HLRA), takes the position that it should be a one-year agreement because years two and three are left absolutely up in the air.

The award calls for a four-per-cent wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1, 1978, to be followed by a seven-per-cent increase in 1979 and equity with B.C. government health care workers in 1980. There also is a provision to reopen wage negotiations in 1979 if the Consumer Price Index in Vancouver rises by more than seven per cent.

In addition, the two parties must negotiate a formula for comparability with the B.C. Government Employees Union, taking into account the terms of their new contract in 1979, or failing that must refer the matter to another arbitration board.

"If this is upheld the HLRA hospitals will be put in the position where another union that they don't deal with will, over the next few years, be doing the bargaining for HEU," Shaw said.

The union gave up its right to strike in order to apply for arbitration under the new provincial Essential Services Dispute Act.

Jack Gerow, HEU secretary-business manager, the union's nominee on the arbitration board, supported the award while the HLRA representative I. G. Nathanson opposed it.

HEU members at four hospitals held brief wildcat strikes last week to protest the HLRA's reluctance to implement the award. The Labor Relations Board then ordered the hospitals to adopt the award.

100 Beds Closing?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver General Hospital might close more than 100 beds because of a shortage of nursing staff, a VGH spokesman said Wednesday.

However, Faye Cooper said that a request from surgical head nurses for the closures would not be a major factor in any decision to close beds.

Copper said that from 50 to 200 beds are closed each summer because of staff shortages and renovations. Student nurses leave in mid-August and VGH is short-staffed until recent graduates arrive mid-September.

A much higher number than 100 beds was mentioned when surgical head nurses met Tuesday with VGH administrator Peter Bazowski to request closures, she said.

Apple Harvest Up from 1977

KELOWNA (CP) — B.C. fruit farmers will harvest close to eight million 42-pound boxes of apples this year — up more than one million boxes from last year.

John Thompson, of B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd., said Thursday the apples will either go to market or into the controlled atmosphere plant here, where they can be preserved for up to a year.

Although the entire North American apple market is considered strong, Thompson said B.C. Tree Fruits, which sells the apples, does not forsee any problems in getting a good price for the crop.

Norcen Energy Resources Ltd., PanCanadian Petroleum Ltd., Siebens Oil and Gas Ltd. and Giant Reef Petroleum Ltd. paid $1,800,278 or $297.62 a hectacre for a parcel 100 kilometres northeast of Fort Nelson.

Kildonan Oil Ltd. paid $1,146 or $440 a hectacre for a parcel 80 kilometres northeast of Fort St. John.

GREAT INNER TUBE RACE

Sign Up, Start Paddlin'

Inner tubers, dig up those air pumps.

The Great Inner Tube Race is Sept. 10 with a parade, dance, refreshments and a lot of good wet fun in store.

Top tubers are tuning up for the event and there's an unconfirmed report that a Times team will take the plunge and challenge any and all-comers.

The great thing about the race and the accompanying events, which include a Tubers Ball on Sept. 9 at the Victoria Curling Rink and a Miss Inner Tube contest, is that everything's informal.

The entry fee is only $5 for a two-member team and there's no expensive equipment to buy. Just get hold of an older inner tube, a couple of life jackets and you and your partner are away to the race.

The race is organized by the Hampton Park Hustlers and sponsored by the Times and proceeds from the race go to help a great number of amateur sports teams in the Greater Victoria district.

It's a fun event and one that anyone over 16 is welcome to enter.

Vancouver Rape Case Rise Noted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The number of rapes in Vancouver during the first six months of 1978 was up by more than 120 per cent over last year's figure, according to a police department report presented to the police board Wednesday.

Attempted rapes and indecent assaults on women also increased in the first half of the year, while over-all criminal offences jumped by 9.2 per cent over last year.

Deputy police chief Ted Oliver said there has been a special detail assigned to the downtown area to counter the increased assaults.

There were three rapes or attempted rapes in June, 1977, while there were six during the same period this year, bringing the number to 64 for the period ending June, 1978, compared with 29 for the same period last year.

There has been an increase of more than 50 per cent in the number of indecent assaults on women over the last year, the report says.

Indecent assaults increased to 26 in June from 16 for the same month last year.

Police Chief Don Winterton suggested it would be a mistake to compare the offence figures on a month-by-month basis as there were hidden variables at work which might cause the figures to present an untrue picture of the city crime rate.

He said the crime rate was up over the last two years, but on a four-year average it decreased.

Film Won't Be Shown

VANCOUVER (CP) — A controversial Japanese film that has been acclaimed at international festivals but called a stag movie by a city prosecutor will not not screened tonight after police said it could prompt obscenity charges.

Chris Van Snellenberg, district supervisor of Canadian Odeon Theatres, said Thursday that the company decided not to include tonight's showing of In the Realm of the Senses at the theatre's annual international film festival.

The film, scheduled for two showings only at the Varsity Theatre festival, "just isn't that important to us," and defying a warning from police and prosecutors that action would be taken under the obscenity section of the Criminal Code if it were shown again would entail a long, costly legal battle.

Odeon Theatres, he said, is not prepared to undertake this action for a film the company sees as having limited public appeal and not being a money-maker.

The film was shown to a full house Monday after it was approved by Mary-Lou McCausland, British Columbia's film classification officer.

At a newss conference Thursday, Staff Sergeant Harold Brittain of the city police vice squad warned that if the film were shown again, police would take enforcement action.

Crown prosecutor Richard Israels called it a stag film, adding that he believes both the sex and violence in it contravene the Criminal Code.

Ms. McCausland said the film was approved by a concensus of her film classifiers because "it seemed appropriate for an international film festival," although it did not have approval for general distribution.

She said the film was first classified last year but was not shown in B.C. because the distributors refused to make the cuts requested by her agency.

U.S. BEER GLUT WON'T LAST

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday the government does not plan to list more brands of American beer once the current labor dispute in the B.C. brewing industry is ended.

"There is no suggestion of allowing any more American beer to be sold in liquor stores," said Mair, the minister responsible for liquor administration and distribution.

"We have two brands sold now which have been sold in the past, and they are the only two listed.

"I know of no other American beer that has asked for a listing."

The minister said his ministry is conducting a review of liquor policy and liquor advertising, and is preparing a moderation campaign.

He said he believes there has been a misunderstanding about which direction the government is taking.

"The suggestion has been that we will loosen up the advertising regulations — but there is another way we could go, and that is to tighten them up, namely to go the Saskatchewan route and block out liquor ads coming in on cablevision from the United States."

Beef Price Branded For Rise in Rustling

VANCOUVER (CP) — As the price of beef rises, so does cattle rustling, in British Columbia.

RCMP estimate that 300 head were stolen last year compared with 145 reported stolen in 1976, the last year for which full figures are available.

Corporal Ian Robertson of Williams Lake RCMP said Thursday that more cattle have been rustled already this year than in the past two years and the season hasn't even got under way.

"September and October are the bad months," he said. "The cattle are still out on the range and the weather is cool enough for butchering in the bush."

Unlike salmon poaching which is becoming highly organized, Robertson believes virtually all of the cattle are stolen by local residents.

"Talk to any rancher and he will blame his losses on hunters from Vancouver. But I don't think they are as guilty as they are labelled. The hunters who come up here just don't know the back country roads well enough to find a beef, butcher it and spirit the carcass out without getting caught."

Robertson said range patrols organized by ranchers and wildlife groups have been effective in the Lumby area and in the Nicola Valley, "but it is very difficult to guage their effectiveness in other areas although they are bound to be a deterrent."

He said more horses also are being stolen as the price of horse meat also rises.

He believes many of these stolen horses are shipped to Washington State for butchering.

"We had a reciprocal agreement with the Americans on stolen horses until a year ago when horses were taken out of the Brands Act by the provincial government," he said.

Robertson said the rustlers have not yet moved in on the sheep herds — "We hung all the sheep thieves 100 years ago and it still has an effect."

Bill Stewart of Heffly Creek, past president of the B.C. Cattlemen's Association, fears losses will be heavy this fall as a result of the high beef prices, but losses won't be known until the cattle are brought from their summer ranges.

Stewart said cattle are especially vulnerable when ranging in wooded areas.

He said game checks, a maximum penalty of 10 years for livestock theft or range patrols have little effect on rustlers.

Provincial brands recorder Bill McConnell said road patrols will be stepped up this year and vehicles will be inspected if there is reason to believe they are carrying stolen beef.

"We already have one conviction for cattle rustling in Salmon Arm this year and have two other cases under investigation. Another rustler was convicted last year."

McConnell said horses were taken out of the Brands Act because its primary objective is to identify ownership of livestock and only a small percentage of horses in B.C. are branded.

Refugee Fears Camel-Stretch

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Immigration Appeal Board has reserved decision on a motion to deport a North Yemen man who claims he will be drawn and quartered if he is sent back to his native land.

Mahmoud Megalli, 34, now being held on a deportation order, appeared before the board seeking status as a political refugee. His first application for refugee status was turned down in April.

Ray Cantillon, Megalli's lawyer, said the board, which reserved decision Wednesday, promised to reach a decision in the near future.

Megalli says he is accused by North Yemeni authorities of assassinating a government official three years ago in Egypt. He was serving a sentence in a West German prison at the time.

Cantillon said his client told him the custom in North Yemen — a desert feudal society on the Red Sea — is to turn the suspect over to the victim's family for justice.

"I'm told that being drawn-and-quartered by camels is still an allowable punishment in North Yemen," Cantillon said. "That means tying his limbs to four separate camels. Then he is torn apart."

Cantillon said Megalli is being deported from Canada because of a 1974 conviction in Montreal for trafficking in hashish, for which he served a four-year sentence.

The lawyer said Megalli was born in North Yemen, but was denied citizenship because his mother was Jewish. Megalli now is a stateless person who apparently entered Canada on a Lebanese passport.

Cantillon said he was in the process of contacting some other countries to take Megalli — including Egypt, South Yemen and Afghanistan.

Walter Jennings, Vancouver immigration centre manager, said his department had no details of the North Yemeni charges against Megalli.

An official of the North Yemeni embassy in Washington, D.C., also responsible for Canadian relations, said that Megalli faces prosecution when he is returned, but did not know what charges Megalli faces.

Wrong Lubricant Cited in Sacking

The provincial government has terminated the contract of a medical doctor for mistreating women at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in Burnaby, a spokesman said Thursday.

Corrections commissioner Bernard Robinson said the doctor was dismissed for using an improper lubricant during an internal examination.

He said toothpaste was used instead of surgical jelly.

The firing followed complaints by five Doukhobor earlier this summer that they had been held in austere surroundings, had their clothes taken away from them, had been denied visiting rights and received improper medical treatment.

Robinson said an investigation found that their clothes were taken away and that they were placed in unpleasant surroundings because they insisted on burning everything in sight.

He said the women had not been denied visiting rights.

Visit to Disney World Ahead of High Finance

By HOBART ROWEN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Last Friday night, while vacationing at Walt Disney World, the Saudi Arabian minister of finance and political economy, Mohammed Abalkhail, telephoned U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

One of the most powerful men in his government, Abalkhail told Blumenthal he had noted with interest President Carter's statement two days earlier expressing concern about the declining value of the dollar. Since his government, too, was worried about the dollar, could he get a better idea of Carter's plan?

Next morning, in a dramatic example of where power lies in the modern world, an Air Force Jetstar was whizzing Blumenthal and Under Secretary for Monetary Affairs Anthony Solomon to Disney World, near Orlando, Fla. Put aside for the moment were Blumenthal's plans to go to Ann Arbor, Mich., to pick up an honorary degree and Solomon's scheduled flight to Denver to rejoin his ailing wife.

The upshot of the Blumenthal-Abalkhail visit was an interview published mid-week in a Kuwaiti newspaper in which Saudi Crown Prince Fahd, re-iterated confidence in the dollar and rejected the idea of pricing Saudi oil in other currencies. Treasury officials claim that Fahd's statement — which helped bolster the dollar in Wednesday foreign exchange markets — was a direct result of Blumemthal's soothing words last Saturday.

For three intensive hours, while tourists were enjoying the make-believe of Disney World, Abalkhail, Blumenthal and Solomon were dealing with the real one of oil prices and inflation in the Saudi minister's hotel suite.

Abalkhail sought, and got, a review of administration and Federal Reserve plans to bolster the dollar. Blumenthal and Solomon assured him that the American trade and current account deficits are in the process of turning down. They re-iterated Carter's determination to control inflation.

By telephone to Riyadh, Abalkhail relayed the gist of the conversation to Fahd and came back to Blumenmthal with a few additional questions. From Washington on Sunday, and again on Monday, Blumenthal talked to Abalkhail in Disney World.

What specific promises, if any, the Treasury official delivered to the Saudis is unknown. But his sales pitch was rewarded when Fahd gave his interview to Al-Siyassa.

The United States is counting on the Saudis to dampen the demands elsewhere in the oil cartel for a sharp increase in the price of oil.

Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani recently affirmed that the Saudis will press their partners to keep any future oil price increases gradual, despite the fact that U .S. inflation and the declining value of the dollar have meant a loss of from 10 to 14 percent in the real price of oil in just the last year.

During the precipitate decline of the dollar exchange rate in the past month, rumors have multiplied that the cartel might price its oil in some currency other than the dollar, or in a "basket" of currencies that might hedge its bets against foreign exchange losses.

But the Saudis are reluctant to move away from the dollar, despite the beating it has taken recently. Such a move would be a hard blow to the prestige of the dollar, which is not in the interest of the Saudis, who have heavy investments and reserves in dollars.

Beyond that, to move into the Japanese yen, or West German marks, or a "basket" of currencies carries its own risks: if the dollar recovers, then the Saudis would be stuck with a decline in the other currencies.

President Resigns

MONTREAL (CP) — Edward Paul Zimmerman, who guided The Reader's Digest through a recent crucial period when the federal government was establishing its new magazines policy, has resigned.

In a statement Thursday, The Reader's Digest Association (Canada) Ltd. said Zimmerman, an 18-year veteran of the company, gave pressing family matters as the reason for his resignation.

The company's board of directors assigned vice-president Ralph Hancox to take up the "duties and powers of the president relating to operations of the corporation, consistent with his not being a director of the corporation."

Machete-Slash Victim Given $5,000 Award

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Penticton man who was slashed in the face by a man wielding a machete when he tried to rescue two women has been awarded $5,500 under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act.

He received one of the 51 awards totalling $108,000 handed out in July by the Workers' Compensation Board.

The WCB said in a news release that an 18-year-old Prince George man who was axed in the shoulder by an attacker was awarded $1,250 for injuries and loss of wages.

A 60-year-old woman from the Interior received $250 for facial contusions suffered when a woman attacked her

Six other victims who were beaten up in their homes or on their property received a total of $4,931 for injuries and loss of wages.

ANOTHER TALL SHIP

A fourth tall ship — the Sagres II from Portugal and a sister to the U.S. Eagle — will visit Victoria as part of the Capt. Cook bicentennial.

The three-masted steel barque is currently en route from the Eastern Atlantic with an arrival date set for Oct. 19.

The 268-foot Sagres II will be open to the public during her three-day stay here, and then heads for Vancouver.

Poetry Inspires Recital Number

The Saturday recital series at Christ Church Cathedral this week will feature lyric-coloratura soprano Leslie Allison in a program that will include the Mozart motet, Exultate Jubilate, and a selection of operatic arias.

Ms. Allison will be assisted at the piano by Rupert Lang and she will also perform his song cycle, Lovers in Winter, a composition based on poems by British poet, Robert Graves.

Allison returned to Canada a year ago after completing four years of study in Europe. Following a successful concert at The Belfry in May, she sang leading roles in An English Lesson, by Gabriel Charpentier, and La Finta Semplice, by Mozart with the Opera Studio of the Courtenay Youth Music Camp conducted by Jacqueline Richard.

Lang is a conductor and pianist who has performed extensively in Canada and Britain. His song cycle, to be heard here for the first time, was written for his degree in music at Cambridge University.

The recital will take place at 4 p.m.

CARPENTRY CONTEST

Victorian David Autio and Fred Bowser of Surrey will represent B.C. in the International Carpentry Apprenticeship Contest to be held in Edmonton in November.

The two placed tops in their trades at the 16th annual provincial contest held Aug. 18 and 19 in Burnaby.

Autio is in the carpentry trade and Bowser is in the benchwork and joinery trade.

Jonathan Raitt of Victoria placed third in the carpentry contest

Courts Chaotic: Judge

The chief judge of the Victoria provincial court Thursday described the state of the court as almost chaotic.

Judge William Ostler made the comment after he was told by crown counsel Richard Anthony a case scheduled that morning didn't go ahead and police witnesses sent home because the defendent didn't reach Victoria from Tofino in time.

Defence-lawyer Scott Marshall explained his client was aware of the court date, got up at 5 a.m. and began his trip to Victoria with his wife driving.

Marshall said his client went to sleep early in the trip and the driver decided to pull off the road near Nanaimo and get some sleep as well. When they awoke, Marshall said, they realized they would not make it in time for the 9:30 a.m. trial.

After calling the court lists "almost chaotic," Ostler said he and the other judges are becoming increasingly irritated over cancellations of trials which leave courtrooms empty while some accused have to wait up to five months to have cases heard.

Trials are now being booked as far ahead as February, 1979, and Ostler called the backlog severe and unacceptable.

Following the tirade, Ostler set a new date for the youth's trial for Jan. 18 but ordered him to report to a bail supervisor and to call the supervisor the day before the trial to inform him or her that he was aware of the trial the next day and to advise the supervisor of the method of transportation.

Before the Judge

A 31-year-old man who became upset Wednesday when a bank employee refused to accept a large tin of pennies was fined $250 in Victoria provincial court Thursday after pleading guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Judge William Ostler levied the fine on Ernest Bevan Brown, 230 Gorge Road East.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Brown entered the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 2925 Tillicum, at about 2:40 p.m. Wednesday with between $50 and $75 in pennies and asked employee Lynn Squance to change it.

Brown was told the pennies would only be accepted if rolled and he was given the paper. However, Law continued, Brown insisted and was then informed the bank employee would do it for him but would charge him for the time it took.

After agreeing, Brown apparently took an ink well and pen set and threw it at the employee, striking her on the head before it hit the wall behind her.

Brown was arrested later by Saanich police.

Ostler was also informed that Brown, who has been in mental institutions in Penoka, Alta., and Trail, was also examined by a doctor prior to his court appearance and the doctor said Brown sometimes took advantage of his mental condition.

After the fine was imposed, Brown's mother stood up in court and told Ostler her son badly needed mental health care but couldn't seem to get any assistance.

Ostler said he could not do anything in light of the doctor's remarks but said there are provisions under the Mental Health Act.

A self-admitted former alcoholic unlucky in a bureaucratic shuffle was fined $250 for stealing two 12-ounce bottles of whisky from the Liquor Administration Branch store in Saanich.

Michael Wadrose, 2866 Fifth Street, pleaded guilty to theft under $200 and was fined $250.

Law said Wadrose, a janitor at the Saanich liquor store for five months, was spotted July 28 with bulges in his jacket pocket, where the two bottles, valued at $8.30, were found.

Wadrose told the court he was employed previously by the public works ministry, which was dissolved when the new B.C. Buildings Corporation was formed.

In the reshuffle, Wadrose said, he was assigned to work at the McKenzie Avenue store.

Ostler handed out the heavier-than-usual fine because Wadrose held a position of trust.

The undisputed leader in appearances in Victoria provincial court over the last two decades resurfaced again Thursday and was given another one-month jail term.

Frank Peter Ellis, 60, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by shouting in the 800-block Gordon.

Law said Ellis was drawing a crowd with colorful language at about 11:45 p.m. Wednesday night.

After noting Ellis had remained out of jail for an amazing 1½ months, Ostler turned to him and said the only way he kept alive was by being in prison where he could dry out and get some decent food.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Dennis Sitford Charles Jeannes, 29, of 1139 Tattersall, $350; Michael Todd Sharp, 24, of 3963 Bethel Place, $350; John Arthur Soderman, 29, of 981 McKenzie, $50 and Robert Thomas Frew, 18, of 2081 James White Boulevard, $50.

In addition, Jeannes was fined $200 for driving while under suspension, Soderman was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work and Frew was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Prison Protest

BURNABY (CP) — About 23 prisoners in the women's unit at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre near Vancouver staged a sit-in Thursday to protest treatment of a prisoner suffering from drug withdrawal symptoms, a corrections branch official said.

Lloyd Hopper, a district director of the branch, said the prisoners refused to go back to their cells at lockup time Wednesday night. He said they stayed in their day room, complaining about what they thought was inadequate medical attention for the prisoner.

Hopper said the woman, who is under medication, was checked out by the prison doctor. He said a meeting was taking place between prison representatives and a member of the inspections and standards branch of the corrections service.

DOGS TURNED ON STUDENT PARTY

CALGARY (CP) — City police broke departmental policy when they used dogs to quell a disturbance at an outdoor party for high school students west of the city June 17, Ernie Reimer, the city's deputy police chief told the Police Commission Thursday.

"Police dogs were never intended to be used," said Reimer, adding that it will never happen again.

The dogs were brought in as a back-up and were taken into the fray after an officer called for help, he added.

Reimer said police went to the party after neighbors complained about excessive noise from the more than 400 students. The incident began after someone kicked a can of gasoline onto an open fire, igniting the clothing of two students.

He said police grabbed the students and rolled them on the ground to put the fire out. The deputy chief said the rest of the crowd took this to be an assault, surrounded the policemen and started throwing bottles.

The dogs were kept on their leashes at all times, he said.

Quebec Wins Week Delay In Radioactive Waste Case

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — The Quebec Environment Protection Service was granted a one-week extension Thursday of a temporary injunction forbidding the hauling of radioactive waste from an abandoned columbium mine at the nearby town of Oka.

Quebec Superior Court Justice Jean Provost extended the temporary injunction until Aug. 31, when a request for a permanent injunction is scheduled to be heard.

The temporary injunction against Les Agregats d'Oka was issued last week to stop the company from selling the waste, which the government says contains eight radioactive elements, including radium 226, bismuth, and radon.

The company had been taking away the radioactive fill since May for use in road construction, dam building and perhaps other projects.

Columbium, a metal useed in stainless steel and other alloys, is not radioactive but the metal is often found in ore bodies which contain traces of radioactive elements.

The government maintains in its injunction request that additional radiation emitted during the hauling operation exceeds the norm of five millirems a year, which is the limit for new projects.

A second norm of 500 millirems is applied by the government to existing radiation sources, such as the radioactive waste heap outside the abandoned mine. Readings as high as 419 millirems have been recorded outside houses near the mine.

Meanwhile, Dr. Fred Knelman, professor of science and human affairs at Concordia University in Montreal, added heat to the controvesy, saying there is "no such thing as a safe level of radiation—no matter how small the exposure, there are serious risks.

POLICE CHIEF ON POT CHARGE

JOLIETTE, Que. (CP) — Maurice Houle, 51, police chief of Repentigny near Montreal, has been charged by Quebec provincial police with possessing and cultivating marijuana.

Houle was arraigned in sessions court Thursday after investigators allegedly found 47 marijuana plants growing in a vegetable garden beside his summer home at Lavaltrie, 45 kilometres northeast of Montreal.

Houle shares the garden with Marie-Andree Sicotte, a neighbor. She was also charged.

Investigators said the plants could make three to four kilograms of marijuana which could be sold for $12,000 to $16,000.

Houle, a father of eight who has been a Repentigny policeman for more than 20 years, was released on his own recognizance. Preliminary hearing has been tentatively set for Sept. 5.

This Case Really Takes The Bird

CALGARY (CP) — James Butler, of Calgary, charged with illegal possession of predatory bird feathers, was remanded to Aug. 30 when he appeared in provincial court.

He reserved plea, but his lawyer, Chris Evans, said Butler will plead not guilty at his next court appearance.

Alberta fish and game officials earlier this month seized a feathered headdress and dance bustle from Butler under a section of the Wildlife Act that prohibits possession of birds of prey or their parts. The bustle has since been returned.

It was the third known confiscation of feathered goods in the city this summer.

But of the three, it is the only case to date in which charges have been laid.

Freeze on CIDA Cash Blasted

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Gerin-Lajoie, once Canada's top foreign development official, Thursday criticized the government's recent decision to freeze the foreign aid budget and urged new measures to promote development.

Gerin-Lajoie proposed at a conference on the future a $1 billion emergency fund to developing countries.

Such a fund would produce more jobs here because Canadian goods and services would be used in much of the foreign development projects.

He also recommended a royal commission on international development to study Canadian aid efforts and promote public interest in such projects.

Now a Montreal business consultant, Gerin-Lajoie later said the government's decision to freeze CIDA's budget at this year's level is short-sighted.

"I feel it is a pity because, having in mind the place of Canada in a global society, this is a result of a short-term view."

Treasury Board President Robert Andras recently announced the freeze as part of the government's program to reduce proposed spending by $2.4 billion this year and next. The CIDA freeze means the agency will have to keep next year's budget at this year's level.

Andras said CIDA would be unable to spend $133 million that had been committed for next year.

The government has long been criticized by foreign development supporters for failing to reach a development aid target Ottawa set years ago. The government has said it wants to provide funds equal to .7 per cent of the gross national product—the country's total production of goods and services.

Gerin-Lajoie guided CIDA through a stormy period in the early 1970s, resigning last year to set up his international business consulting firm.

The auditor-general and some MPs accused CIDA of poor financial management toward the end of Gerin-Lajoie's regime. The auditor-general is the watchdog on federal spending.

The development expert told the conference on Canada and the future of the world that the $1 billion emergency fund should be in addition to CIDA's $1 billion annual budget.

The money would be managed by a mixture of government agencies and private industry and would be spent over a two-to-four year period.

He suggested the fund could get around the federal freeze on foreign aid because it would be "linked directly to fighting unemployment in Canada."

ATTENTION: Mr. Ron Pahl,
Sales Representative

Dear Ron,

Once again through the advertising exposure of your newspaper another Real Estate transaction has been successfully completed.

The property was listed on the eleventh (11th) of July, advertised on the fifteenth (15th) and sold on the seventeenth (17th). Both Vendors and Purchasers are completely satisfied.

It just proves once again that a properly worded ad (professionally specific) that does not insult the buying publics' intelligence, given maximum exposure through your circulation, will bring satisfactory results.

Thanks Ron!

Yours truly,

Epidemic Crisis Warning

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — It is only a matter of time before there is a major epidemic of polio or diphtheria in Canada because immunization levels are low, a doctor at Queen's University warns.

"We've become complacent because our memories of the devastating epidemics of the past are gone," according to Dr. Robert Steele.

"But the germ is always there and when the general immunization level falls, you're going to get epidemics."

Dr. Steele, head of the community health and epidemiology department at Queen's, said there have been a number of cases of diphtheria across the country in the last few months in addition to a polio outbreak.

Pall Ardal, a professor at the university, said the threat of a serious epidemic is sufficient reason to introduce compulsory immunization.

He said society should not tolerate conscientious objectors to immunization because they are endangering other people's health.

All the victims of Canada's recent polio outbreak, which has left eight persons suffering from the disease, had ties with Dutch religious sects, whose members refuse immunization because they say it is interference with the will of God.

New Routing Set for Trains

TORONTO (CP) — Via Rail wants to adopt a new routing for transcontinental passenger rail services to begin this fall, according to company president Frank Roberts.

The routing would consolidate trains in Winnipeg, not Sudbury as proposed by the Canadian transport commission, he said Thursday.

Via's proposed routing would mean the continued operation for at least another year for two trains a day on the transcontinental route between Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, he added.

Under the plan, one train would leave Montreal and travel over both CN and CP Rail lines through Ottawa, North Bay, Capreol and on to Winnipeg.

It would eliminate the need for the twice-weekly local train through Northern Ontario. A second train would leave Toronto and travel through Sudbury and Thunder Bay to Winnipeg.

Western inter-city operations would begin operating by 1981 with the coming into service of the new high-speed trains and the company has placed an order for 10 of the new trains, Roberts said.

The first of these trains will be delivered in 1980 and placed in service between Quebec City, Montreal and Ottawa.

Ultimate objective is to eventually operate one long-distance train a day on the transcontinental route between Halifax and Vancouver.

The inter-city trains supplemented by refurbished dayliner trains will serve regional and local needs in different areas of the country, he explained.

Housing Dip Seen

SAINT JOHN (CP) — Housing starts for the year will be between 220,000 and 230,000, an 8.4 per cent drop from 1977, according to Housing and Urban Development of Canada president William Small of Toronto.

The National Association of Home Builders in the United States has forecast a decline of 10 per cent in housing starts in 1978 in that country, he said.

Small predicted that with unemployment averaging eight per cent, there would be only modest pressures for increased building industry labor settlements.

Bourbon Street Blue At Prima Death News

Times News Services

NEW ORLEANS — Louis Prima left town before anyone ever heard of Pete Fountain and Al Hirt, but the Bourbon Street musicians who fill the French Quarter with jazz remember him as a champion showman and a premier musician.

Prima, the roughneck son of a truckdriver who rose from the saloons of New Orleans to top billing in Las Vegas with his searing trumpet and gravel-edged voice, died of pneumonia Thursday after nearly three years in a coma.

"He was a master showman and a very hard worker — everything was bam, bam, bam," Hirt said. "Boy, could he keep it going — he could keep the audience entertained."

Prima never fully regained consciousness after brain surgery three years ago in Los Angeles. He was returned to his native city in February 1976.

"I think Louis taught a lot of people showmanship," said Fountain after learning of Prima's death. "I think he was one of the best entertainers who ever came out of New Orleans.

"A lot of people are still following in his footsteps, singing like he did."

It was his singing voice, a cross between Louis Armstrong and Popeye, that made Prima distinctive.

Prima, who emerged from the Benny Goodman band to form his own high-powered band that took over the Las Vegas strip, died Thursday. He was 67.

But he was perhaps most famous for teaming in the 1950s with Keely Smith, who provided a deadpan contrast to Prima's boundless exuberance.

Their recording of Old Black Magic hit the top of the charts in 1961, about the time their eight-year marriage ended in divorce.

Pianist Ronnie Cole said Prima had the rare talent to communicate his energy through recordings.

"You can hear the excitement on his records," Kole said.

"Satchmo had it, Nat King Cole and Garland had it. Every time I hear his records I'm going to see him up there smiling and letting it all hang out."

Tina Jumps Queue for Red Flat

MOSCOW (UPI) — Christina Onassis Kauzova and her Russian husband by-passed years of waiting and secured a hard-to-find seven-room apartment in Moscow for $150-a-month, the heiress said Thursday.

Many Russian couples could easily have two children and a divorce while waiting for a vacancy, for it can take up to five years to get an apartment. Christina and husband Sergei Kauzov got theirs within two weeks.

And it is virtually unheard of for two people to be allowed to rent an apartment of seven rooms.

Christina told UPI Thursday they will pay the equivalent of $150 a month for their flat.

"The apartment's near the botanical garden," she said, "wherever that is."

Christina, 27, heiress to Aristotle Onassis' $500 million shipping empire, and Sergei, a former Soviet shipping agent 10 years her senior, were married Aug. 1 in a quiet ceremony at the palace of weddings in Moscow.

But four days later, Christina suddenly caught a plane for Athens, prompting rumors that the marriage — her third — was in trouble.

She denied the rumors, saying she was called away on urgent business.

Christina said her days had been busy since she returned to Moscow Aug. 14.

"There hasn't been time to get bored," she said. "I've been going to the market, to the stores, to the embassy every day."

BOY WONDER BERNSTEIN 60 TODAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leonard Bernstein, eternal boy wonder of American music, turns 60 today with the feeling that "I have only begun to write music."

The composer-conductor is observing the occasion by doing what he has done for 35 years — conducting an orchestra.

Chretien Statement Sounds Like Budget Policy

But the government now proposes a tax credit of $200 per child for each child under age 18 that will be paid in full to families with incomes up to $18,000. The credit is to be reduced by $5 for every $100 of earnings above $18,000.

Chretien said the change would make the social security system more selective in future.

The credit would be paid for by the reduction in the basic allowance, elimination of the present $50 tax credit per child and a reduction in the tax exemption for children aged 16 and 17.

Families who do not earn enough to pay income tax will also be eligible for the tax credit, Chretien said.

He cited an example in which a family with three children paying no income tax would receive $200 per child or $600 through the credit and $720 in family allowances for a total of $1,320. This is $312 more than the family would get under present plans, he said.

The $20 increase in the guaranteed income supplement (GIS) paid to pensioners who have little or no other source of income will raise the GIS to $219.04 a month for a couple and to $132.08 for a single person.

The supplement is in addition to the basic old-age pension, now $159.79 a month.

Chretien also said the government is immediately reducing its 10-cents-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline to seven cents, effectively offsetting a government-imposed price increase of 3.5 cents that would have taken place next week.

The federal proposals also call for postponement of a planned 3.5-cents-a-gallon increase in gasoline and home-heating oil that would have hit consumers by March 1.

"As a result of this measure, we expect that in most areas across Canada there should be little or no change in the price of gasoline at the pump for some time," Chretien said.

All three measures, he added, should help those hardest hit by inflation, currently at an annual rate of 9.8 per cent.

Chretien also said there will be changes proposed to the unemployment insurance program that will cut financial requirements in the 1979-80 fiscal year by $580 million.

Real economic growth in the second quarter, according to finance department estimates, was about one per cent, compared with seven-tenths of one per cent in the first quarter, he said.

Chretien's announcement met with little enthusiasm from two members of British Columbia's financial community.

Bill Hamilton, president of the B.C. Employers' Council, said the announcement did not include anything which would encourage the business community to make major investment decisions. He said changes must be made which would increase investment, otherwise the economy will continue to falter.

Provincial Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said the result of the announced changes will be "just a minor reduction in their (the federal government's) expenditures".

He said the bottom line will be the specifics of the changes and the alterations in local programs.

Wolfe added that the federal-provincial cost-sharing programs suggested by Chretien may be very expensive and, if implemented as they stand, could "create havoc."

A 'Sell-Out' To Business: Consumers

OTTAWA (CP) — A government "sell-out" to business interests seems to be behind the serious consideration federal authorities are giving to elimination of consumer group subsidies, officials of the Consumers' Association of Canada said Thursday.

Association spokesmen said the proposed elimination of the $2.5-million consumer services branch of the consumer affairs department apparently represents a policy that "will favor all things business and abandon consumers."

The 100,000-member association is urging consumers to launch a mass protest against proposals that could lop a total of $7 million off the $80 million budget of the department.

The cuts now have gained the first stages of cabinet approval, said former CAC president James O'Grady.

The consumer services branch now supplies the consumer groups with grants totalling $900,000 annually, some of which is used to oppose business representations before federal government regulatory agencies such as the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission and the Canadian transport commission.

However, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand, speaking in Charlottetwon, said today he believes his department can cut $7 million from its budget without eliminating the consumer services branch or greatly affecting the department's grant program.

"It's going to hurt but we are going to try and take it from places where it will hurt the least and, certainly, if I have it my way, it won't come from the grant program," he said.

Boss Says 'No Big Deal'

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

You sense something different about the Bank of Montreal branch at Shelbourne and Pear.

You look around. A teller smiles at you. The young woman looking after accounts peers at you inquisitively. A secretary seeing you looking somewhat lost approaches.

"Who would you like to see?"

"The bank manager."

You are escorted to a small office and only when you are face to face with the manager does it dawn on you why you felt the bank seemed different from other others in Victoria . . . it's a totally female-staffed bank, probably the first and only one in British Columbia.

"Let me assure it isn't so by design," says manager Joan Firkins.

When she took over the branch office in January, she found herself in charge of a staff of 13 women. It has remained so.

She explains that when former manager Richard Hill was moved to the bank's credit division in Vancouver, a male trainee was also transferred at the same time.

"It just happened that way," she says.

How did the bank's customers react to dealing with an all-female staff?

Firkins says it has made no difference, but adds there were a few male customers at first who seemed somewhat surprised. But they all accepted the change.

"One man walked in here and asked to see the manager," she explained.

"He was shown into my office and we began to talk. After a while, he asked again to see the manager. I told him I was the manager.

"There was silence . . . a pause. 'Oh!,' he said, 'I thought you were the loan manager.' I explained that Mr. Hill had been transferred. After a few minutes the ice was broken and all went well."

Firkins says being a women and holding a bank managers job is "no big deal."

"I'm not here because I'm a woman," she said. "I'm here because I can do the job. That's the way it should be with all jobs. Sex, color or creed should not come into it."

Firkins said most jobs in banks today are held by women because men usually study and train to go directly into management. There is no sex discrimination in the employment of personnel.

"Another factor is that many women who were former bank employees are returning to work in banks for various reasons," she said.

"They are married, have raised a family, and want to return to work. Banks employ them because they are experienced."

She said most women bank managers have come up the hard way, starting at the bottom and working their way through different positions into administration.

"On the other hand, most men go directly into management after training," she said.

"This gives women an edge over men. They get to know all the facets of the operation."

Firkins has had plenty of experience. She has been 17 years with the bank. She managed the Westwood Mall at Port Coquitlam before coming to Victoria.

"Are women more manageable than men"?

"That's a hard one to answer," she replied. "I have had no trouble managing men".

Half a Council Faster than One

Victoria city council probably set a speed record Thursday afternoon, racing through its usually interminable agenda in an hour flat.

Council meetings of four hours or more are the norm.

But Thursday's event was a mostly harmonious affair with hardly a single sour note sounded as 38 items were dealt with in quick succession.

The reason?

Mass absenteeism. Away, for various reasons, were Mayor Mike Young and aldermen Larry Ryan, Bob Wright, and Murray Glazier.

"There are more reporters here than aldermen," half-complained Ald. John Hayes.

He was right. There were six media representatives present, as well as five city hall staffers, and three people in the public gallery. Two members of the public left about the half-way mark.

At one point Hayes rose to support a motion that council meetings be held at 7:30 p.m. for the next four months, starting in September.

"Our public turn-outs at these afternoon meetings have been quite pathetic," he said turning to look at the rows of empty chairs.

"No offence to you," he hurridly added when the lone woman in the galleries blushed.

Council agreed to the night meetings without debate and then continued to rattle through with the rest of the business.

The only sign of discord came when council endorsed a report calling for a committee to standardize commercial and industrial development by-laws in the Greater Victoria region.

That amounted to an endorsation of continued bureaucratic growth at the regional government level, a sore point with some aldermen.

Hayes, who has often said the Capital Regional Board should be phased-out, protested the move.

But aldermen Ron McKenzie and Robin Blencoe disagreed, saying that regional government was the way to go in the future.

McKenzie said the regional district should be strengthened, and somewhere down the road the four municipal governments should be disbanded.

Said McKenzie with a smile: "We (city council) have been here more than 100 years; maybe it's time we moved on and gave birth to something else."

What would normally have been a bitter and wearisomely protracted debate lasted less than ten minutes and nary a scowl was exchanged.

In other business council:

—Heard from traffic committee chairman Ald. Bill McElroy that new truck routes would soon be proposed for James Bay and that recommendations to curtail the competitive and "vulture-like" nature of Victoria tow-away operations would soon be forthcoming.

—Endorsed in principle the concept of an annual beer garden on the Inner Harbor (without naming any possible operator).

—Passed seven bylaws that complete a downzoning of much of James Bay.

—Dealt with a number of zoning matters, including rejection of an application by Terrick Enterprises Ltd. to build a shopping mall and apartments at 1006 Russell St.

As the meeting wrapped up Blencoe looked at the clock and did a double take. It was only 3 p.m.

"Amazing," he said.

Portland Isle Trail Started

A parks summer youth crew has completed about one-third of a proposed trail around the perimeter of Princess Margaret Marine Park on Portland Island, about four miles north of Sidney.

The crew, 20 youths age 15 and 16, mostly from the Interior, was disbanded today after completing several park projects under a provincial summer youth employment program.

Don Carruthers, district park superintendent, said the trail skirting the bluffs of the Portland will be completed next year.

Existing trails, such as the one through the centre of the island, were heavily used by boating people who anchored off the island or camped in the park during the summer months, he said.

"They are popular attractions," he said.

The crew also slashed out a trail in Beaumont Marine Park on Pender Island, he said.

Other projects included the cleaning and marking of all marine buoys at marine parks, the building of a retaining wall at Bamberton Park and tidying up and improving park facilities in general.

Carruthers said visitor attendance at marine parks was up.

STORY GARBAGE —NIELSEN

A grossly distorted story that appeared in a local morning newspaper today performed a great disservice to the Cowichan Estuary Task Force, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said.

The news story reported the task force has recommended there be no further industrial development on the estuary, that Nieslen had rejected the recommendation and that the task force would have to keep meeting until its findings became acceptable to the minister.

Calling the story a bunch of garbage, Nielsen said the newspaper's informant "simply doesn't know anything."

The minister said the newspaper was obviously only reporting what it had been told but "it's unfortunate as hell it was not even moderately verified."

Nielsen said the task force has been doing a pretty good job and for anyone to suggest it is a mere facade performs a disservice to those involved in the study.

The task force is an investigative body that will file its report, when it's completed, to the Environment and Land Use Committee (ELUC).

That committee makes the decisions — not the minister of environment alone, Nielsen said.

The ELUC is comprised of nine cabinet ministers.

Commenting on the same news report, task force member North Cowichan Ald. Graham Bruce said: "It's a complete fabrication."

Bruce said the task force report isn't due until Sept. 20.

The morning newspaper said the report had been completed, reviewed by Nielsen and sent back for revisement.

Bruce said that as far as he knew the minister had been kept up to date on the progress of the report — but had never received any preliminary drafts.

Saanich Must Weigh Profits, Environment

Saanich will reap financial gain from the proposed Interurban Road industrial site but the negative impact on the environment will be much greater than if it was built in Royal Oak, Saanich has been told.

In an impact assessment study released Thursday, council has been informed that the Interurban site has 23 causes that make it less than desirable for industrial development.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said today, "I'm happy with the fact that everything is up front. There are no facets being hidden.

"I want people to bear down on us. I want dialogue and input from the community."

He said the study had been greater in depth than the one done on the Royal Oak site and industrial development at Royal Oak would also have produced negative aspects.

The report warns tillable and potentially tillable agricultural land will be developed, the Mann Avenue extension could cause increased traffic through residential neighborhoods and the site is 2.5 and 2.75 miles from existing highways.

Interurban traffic volumes are expected to grow 300 per cent, development will dominate the landscape, the site will not satisfy firms' wishes for good highway access, and development will take place on land zoned for protection, conservation and recreation, the report warns.

Couvelier said the site is approximately 157.7 acres. Of this, only 88.3 acres would be developed. The remainder is flood plain or high rocky land suitable for lookout parks.

The report, however, says industrialization will be a negative deviation from the characteristic landscape, replacing highly valued landscapes with low-valued ones. The residential quality of the area will be lowered.

It is estimated Saanich will make a 57.5 per cent profit on land sales — $2.73 million — with an average annual profit of $470,000.

But current road costs exclude much that was recommended by the consultant, says the report, and no on-site runoff retention, reduction or filtration is being planned.

The report warns rural-seeking residents will be aleniated by the development and says the site is less desirable than Royal Oak and the relative degree of change in land use is greater than in a developed area.

Valuable Garry oak, easter liies, Douglas fir and Oregon grape forests will be infringed upon, the study states, and runoff from the site will be greatly increased, magnifying flood danger.

It adds that most tenants will be firms relocated from elsewhere in the region.

On the positive side, the report estimates about 1,130 jobs will be provided with a multiplied payroll of $33.42 million annually. Some firms may be saved from leaving the region and property tax revenues will be $353.775 annually, providing a 2.9 per cent general revenue increase.

A spokesman for the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said today Saanich council should immediately reconsider developing the Royal Oak site as an industrial park.

Cedric Steel, head of the Chamber's economic development committee, said, "We's always considered the Royal Oak site to be the best one and it's been in the planning stage for 16 years.

"We're wondering why it took so much time to look for alternative sites.

Seniors 'Pay for Sewers'

A lawyer claimed Thursday that elderly and fixed-income residents of Ganges face lifelong payment for a sewage system to subsidize land speculation in the Saltspring Island community.

Ian Waddell made the comment in Vancouver before Justice H. A. Callaghan in seeking a B.C. Supreme Court injunction to halt any further expenditure of public money on a sewage system he claimed was illegally authorized by the Pollution Control Board.

The petitioners, Yvette Valcourt, Lionel Wood and Fred Sibley, all of Ganges, are claiming a court declaration in an action to be held in October that the decision of W. N. Venables, director of the Pollution Control Branch, directing the Capital Regional District to install a sanitary sewage collectional and disposal system at Ganges, be set aside as invalid.

Justice Callaghan reserved decision on Waddell's application and on preliminary objections against the applications by William Pearce, representing the director of pollution control and Brian Smith, for the regional district.

Waddell's application, made under the Judicial Review Procedure Act, seeks to halt further expenditure of a $376,000 fund, of which $103,000 has already been spent for design costs and incidental expenses relative to the $2.2 million sewage system.

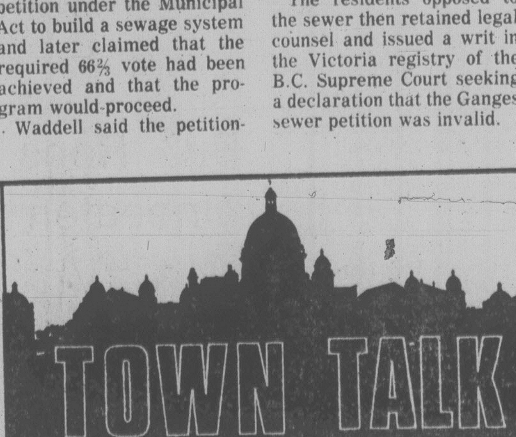
The system would serve about 365 property owners in the Gulf Island community.

Waddell said that in August, 1977, Dennis Young, director of the Capital Regional District, circulated a petition under the Municipal Act to build a sewage system and later claimed that the required 66⅔ vote had been achieved and that the program would proceed.

Waddell said the petitioners who fought the action found numerous irregularities — including unauthorized signatures, and single signatures for jointly-held properties.

He said that after corrections the affirmative vote was 47.31 per cent and that the summary of votes prepared by Young himself showed only 58 per cent affirmative.

The residents opposed to the sewer then retained legal counsel and issued a writ in the Victoria registry of the B.C. Supreme Court seeking a declaration that the Ganges sewer petition was invalid.



Wanted: Cockatoo Called Joe

Hey, you with the Cockatoo, bring it back!

In the first place, burglar, the bird will be hard to fence. And since he's temperamental and prone to quit eating, he may well die.

She doesn't care about the radio but Joe's a rare bird indeed and she'd like him back.

He's white in color with a yellow crest and is a good talker, trotting out phrases like "Hello, Joe" and "Goodbye, see you later" in tones both low and high.

There's a reward of $100. So if you know of anybody who's suddenly acquired a white Cockatoo, a call to Mrs. Lowry at 595-2612 might pay off.

Sharp, a senior citizen, and his wife Agnes last year began planning a holiday in Montreal and made reservations in November for a June flight on Air Canada through the B.C. Auto Association.

Sharp paid for the $502 return flight with his American Express card but May 1 Sharp's wife was hospitalized.

He returned the tickets May 15 and two days later, BCAA issued a credit voucher to Air Canada, who sent the money to the American Express people about June 28.

Sharp is still waiting. American Express in Toronto say they can't issue a cheque until they find the documents although Sharp says he has all the documents and has sent photostats of them to Toronto.

The American Express card. It lets people know who's missing almost $500.

People living in the Gordon Head area couldn't believe their eyes Wednesday when instead of plying her usual route between Seattle and Victoria, they saw the Princess Marguerite steaming up Haro Strait.

It was no lapse of navigation.

She was on charter to the 12th Congress of Universities of the Commonwealth, which has been meeting at the University of British Columbia.

For some of the 1,000 aboard it was a trip down memory lane when they boarded her at the Canadian Pacific Railway dock in Vancover and she took the same route to Victoria as she did when she was a CPR vessel.

Among those smitten with a case of nostalgia was Dr. Bob Wallace, chancellor of the University of Victoria.

The Princess Marguerite resumed her regular run on Thursday.

Too many Cooks, even in Captain Cook's bicentennial year, can spoil the broth for an admirer of the famous mariner's somewhat less famous contemporary.

Retired Times reader Ted Roberts, 1189 Clovelly Terrace, points out that an article on the Provincial Museum last week incorrectly referred to the museum's naval history exhibit as a replica of the stern of Cook's ship Discovery.

Not so, according to Roberts, the vessel is supposed to be Captain George Vancouver's Discovery.

Roberts, a knowledgeable student of the life and exploits of Captain Vancouver, and a consultant in the construction of the exhibit, graciously says the mistake is commonly made — even by historians who should know better.

Talk about late dates.

The booking agency says the late show time is because of restricted theatre availability.

Bring On The Bubbly For Benoit

LAVAL-SUR-LE-LAC, Que. (CP) — Quebec has not tasted the champagne which normally accompanies a victory in the Canadian amateur golf championship since Gordon Baxter Taylor of Montreal, now 70, won the title in 1932.

But a man with the same name as the bubbly, and who grew up next to the fourth hole of the par-72, 6,521-yard Laval Golf Club course, could change all that as the 72-hole tournament enters the third round today.

Benoit Champagne, a corporation lawyer with a major oil company, and who admits he has never won a golf title of importance in his life, shot a three-under-par 69 Thursday for a 36-hole total of 139 and a one-stroke lead over defending champion Rod Spittle of Niagara Falls.

Spittle, who won the title at Ancaster, Ont., last year, was two-under-par in each of his first two rounds for 140, indicating the defending champion's steadiness.

Veteran Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., winner of the event in 1961 at Edmonton and twice United States amateur champion, was two strokes behind Champagne with rounds of 70 and 71.

Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver, champion in 1972 and 1974, was looking for his third title as he and David Mick of Victoria were tied at 143. They were one stroke better than Richard Zokol of Vancouver, George Haines Jr. of Bernardsville, N.J., Bob Mase of East Lansing, Mich., and Mickey Batten of Beauharnois, Que.

Champagne, an amiable man of 35, said he had been playing this course since age 10 and admitted his familiarity with the somewhat unpredictable greens had been a big help.

"I'm playing as well as I can play—up to my potential," Champagne admitted.

The Ontario team successfully defended its title with Spittle, Cowan, Brent Loutit of Hamilton and Nick Weslock of Burlington compiling a 430 total.

British Columbia was second. It was led by Roxburgh and Mick, along with teammates Rick Gibson of Victoria and Bob Mitchell of Richmond. B.C. trailed Ontario by five strokes.

Quebec was third with 442.

Gibson and Nathaniel Crosby, 16, youngest son of the late singer-actor Bing Crosby, are the same age and the youngest competitors in the field. Crosby had a 77 for a 151 total.

Mussels Falter Again; Loss String at Seven

BELLINGHAM — Victoria Mussels absorbed their seventh successive defeat Thursday, bowing 6-4 to Bellingham Mariners near the end of their final road trip of the Northwest League baseball season.

Mussels face Mariners here tonight before returning home for the last seven games of the season against Walla Walla Padres and Grays Harbor Loggers.

Meanwhile, Boise Buckskins slapped Bend Timber Hawks in a doubleader 11-1 and 9-1 and Padres whipped Grays Harbor, 6-4.

In Boise, Rick Martin and Raymie Odermott tossed complete-game victories as the Buckskins registered their 19th and 20th victories of the season. Martin gave up just one hit in winning his first game of the season.

Walla Walla reliever Randy Miller struck out the final two batters with the bases loaded in the last of the ninth to preserve the victory for the Padres.

Walla Walla was ahead 6-0 going into the final inning, when the Loggers erupted for four runs on five hits.

Seahawks Bop Winless Bears

SEATTLE (AP) — Running back Sherman Smith ran for a first-half touchdown and Jim Zorn hit Ron Howard with a fourth-quarter touchdown pass Thursday night to lead Seattle Seahawks to a 16-7 National Football League exhibition victory over winless Chicago Bears.

Efren Herrera, acquired by Seattle from Dallas Cowboys for a draft choice two weeks ago, kicked a 44-yard field goal for the Seahawks other points.

B.C. Reps Unbeaten

REGINA — British Columbia and Ontario lead their respective divisions with unbeaten records after chalking up victories Thursday afternoon in the Canadian senior women's softball championship tournament.

B.C. leads the Blue Division with a 2-0 record after posting a 7-1 decision over Quebec and Ontario topped Saskatchewan 3-1 to lead the Red Division with a 3-0 record.

Donna Blackstock of Victoria, Pat Boswell and Janice Robinson led the 13-hit B.C. attack by driving in two runs each.

Smith Captures Gold After Tongue-Lashing

WEST BERLIN (CP) — An indifferent race Wednesday night and a subsequent tongue-lashing from coach Don Talbot provided the fuel Graham Smith needed as he swam to a gold medal in world-record time Thursday night.

Talbot, his personal instructor for several years, was quick to give him a tongue-lashing following the poor performance.

Smith got the message.

His winning time of two minutes, 3.65 seconds shattered the previous world mark of 2:04.39 held by Steve Lundquist of the United States, one of the swimmers he defeated, and gave Canada its first gold medal in swimming.

Smith had a better-than-normal start and stayed close to the leaders for the first half of the race. He moved in front during the breaststroke leg — his specialty — and then blazed home in the final 50 metres of freestyle.

At the finish he was a body-length in front of Jesse Vassallo of the U.S., 2:04.99. Alexandr Sidorenko of the Soviet Union was third in 2:05.29.

Smith's swim was one of five world records set Thursday, which also produced a bronze medal for Edmonton's Cheryl Gibson.

Gibson, 19, got her bronze in the women's 200-metre backstroke final, won by Linda Jezek of the U.S., in 2:11.93, well under the world mark of 2:12.47 set by Birgit Treiber of East Germany in 1976.

Treiber was second in 2:14.07 while Gibson touched in 2:14.23 after gaining on the East German in the final 50 metres.

The other world records were:

— The U.S. men's 4x200-metre freestyle relay team of Bruce Furniss, Bill Forrester, Bobby Hackett and Ambrose Gaines winning in 7:20.82, beating the 7:23.22 mark the American team set at the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

Smith now has two medals. He won a silver in the 100 breaststroke last Sunday.

Veterans Key In Irish Rally

COQUITLAM — Victoria Shamrocks are two games away from a berth in the Mann Cup series for the Canadian lacrosse championship. And the Irish can thank a great comeback sparked by three great veterans for that preferred position today.

Forwards Ron MacNeil and Ivan Thompson provided the scoring punch and Larry Smeltzer the goalkeeping heroics as the Shamrocks came from behind a two-goal deficit in the third period to defeat Coquitlam Adanacs 11-9 in the second game of their Western Lacrosse Association final series here Thursday night.

Shamrocks won the first game of the best-of-seven final 19-10 Tuesday. The third game will be played at Memorial Arena Saturday night, starting at 8, with the fourth game at Coquitlam on Sunday.

Thursday's game was a see-saw battle, period by period.

Shamrocks had a wide margin of play in the first period as they jumped into a 6-2 lead, and they could have had an even wider margin with any luck. The Adanacs surged to the attack in the second, completely outplayed the Irish and outshot them 24-8 while taking the lead at 8-7. And then, in the third period, after Coquitlam had moved ahead 9-7, the Shamrocks took over again to score four goals without a reply and salt the victory away.

Dan Green, with two of his three goals, and Doug Angrove, with a pair, sparked the Rocks in the first period which also had an unfortunate twist. Smeltzer inadvertently put the ball into his own net while attempting a pass to give Coquitlam its second goal.

In the second period it was all Coquitlam, except for a Shamrock power-play goal by Green; and, cheered on by a capacity crowd of 1,980, the A's, led by junior recruit Mike Reelie, who scored two goals, peppered Smeltzer at will, scored six goals and went on top 8-7.

Reelie got his third goal at 8:29 of the third period to give Coquitlam its 9-7 margin as the partisan crowd went wild, but that was to be the last big hurrah.

Enter the Shamrock veterans, Thompson, MacNeil and Smeltzer.

Thompson and MacNeil each scored two goals and Smeltzer locked the door in goal. And this is the way it happened.

Thompson took a pass from MacNeil for a shorthanded goal at 10:57 and MacNeil scored another shorthanded goal at 12:49 to tie the score.

Then it was Smeltzer's turn. He blocked six straight Adanac shots before hitting MacNeil with a long pass and MacNeil, on a sharp individual effort, put the Rocks ahead 10-9 at 17:14. Thompson got the insurance goal into an empty net with eight seconds to play.

Smeltzer blocked 41 shots in all, including 18 in the second period. John Lewis of Adanacs made 22 saves.

Jerry Kustaski scored the other Shamrock goal. Norm Baker had four assists. MacNeil, who also had two assists, now leads all playoff scorers with 34 points.

Adanacs picked up 37 of the 68 minutes in penalties.

Winner of the series will meet Peterborough Red Oaks, who swept the Ontario Lacrosse Association final series from Owen Sound North Stars in four straight games, winning the final game Thursday 19-8.

CANUCKS STOCK DALLAS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks announced Thursday that the National Hockey League club will set up its farm team in Dallas of the Central Hockey League for the 1978-79 season.

Jake Milford, general manager of the Canucks, concluded talks Wednesday with eight Dallas businessmen who will provide local ownership for the club which will be called Dallas Hawks.

The Canucks will be responsible for running the hockey operation and will provide the players, coach and general manager.

Milford said the Dallas operating group will incur all operating expenses as well as profits and losses.

Construction has started on a new arena in Dallas which will seat 17,000 and be completed in 1980.

Last season, the Canucks operated the Tulsa Oilers franchise in the CHL jointly with Atlanta Flames of the NHL.

A Canucks spokesman said the team pulled out of that arrangement because its players weren't getting enough ice time. Atlanta will continue to participate in the Tulsa franchise.

Sport Salmon Licence Due Early Next Year

Expect a sport salmon fishing licence as early as February or March of next year . . . That's the latest inside word . . . There was vitually no opposition to the concept of a sport salmon licence at a series of public meetings held recently in Campbell River, Courtenay, Port Alberni and Nanaimo — right in hearts of prime salmon-fishing country . . . Providing the bulk of revenue goes back into enhancement activities, this writer finds no quarrel with implimenting such a licence . . . In addition to helping fund the enhancement effort, it will give sports fishermen a greater vested interest — and hence a greater say — in the disposition of the resource . . . Commercial fishermen, too, will likely have their licencing format revamped.

"Tacky" seems an apt word to describe the canned "Steelhead Salmon" being turned out by a Vancouver packing outfit . . . To be sure, there's nothing illegal involved and the steelhead were taken incidently in the process of fishing for salmon . . . But it's distastful for a prime trophy fish to suffer such an ignoble fate . . . Let's hope current research programs will fine-tune salmon fishing techniques enough to virtually eliminate the interception of steelhead.

Saanich School District is again holding an evening course on sport salmon fishing . . . Charles White, the head instructor, will be assisted by special guests Bruce Colgrave, Rhys Davis and Jim Gilbert . . . Included in the course is basic advice on handling baits and lures, proper lure action, trolling, fishing depth and playing and landing salmon . . . It will also cover new downrigger techniques, bucktailing, flashers, bait and drift-fishing . . . A special bonus of this course are films taken by White through a submersible television camera illustrating how salmon approach and strike lures . . . The course will cover five Thursday evenings starting Sept. 14 and costs a minuscule $16 . . . Further information and registration instructions may be obtained by telephoning the Saanich School Board office at 656-1111.

Victoria City Police Athletic Association is holding an open salmon derby this weekend . . . Hours are all-day Saturday starting at dawn and from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday . . . Zone "A" is from Sheringham Point to the northern top of James Island and Zone "B" extends from James to Porlier Pass . . . A total of $700 in cash and numerous merchandise prizes will be given out with awards in each zone . . . Tickets are $7.50 each . . . Further information may be obtained by telephoning Frank Whitton at 479-7059.

For those who haven't noticed . . . Bowhunters will be able to bag buck deer, bear and grouse in most areas of Vancouver Island starting Saturday . . . The regular shotgun season on grouse starts Sept. 2 and rifle-toting deer hunters take to the woods Sept. 9.

Salmon fishing success is good for lunker-sized chinooks off Oak Bay and Victoria waterfronts as well as Pedder Bay, Church Rock, Secretary Island, Otter Point, James Island, Coal Island, Bamberton and Finlayson Arm . . . Good coho fishing was noted between Church and Otter and is rated hot in most areas along the east coast of the Island.

Cablevision A Game Away

BURNABY (CP) — Burnaby Cablevision is all set to wrap up the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League championship tonight.

Burnaby dumped New Westminster Salmonbellies 13-7 Wednesday to take a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final that continues tonight in New Westminster.

Burnaby goalie Rod Banister came up with a hot game, making 54 saves on 61 shots as his teammates fired 51 shots at New Westminster's Ron MacIsaac.

Mike O'Reilly led the winners with three goals while Terry Bingley and John Burden each scored twice. Bruce Turris scored three times for the Salmonbellies and Mark Tuura added two in the cleanly-played third game.

Dolphins Lose Victory As Bombers Pack It In

Victoria Dolphins suffered a cruel setback in the B.C. Big Four Junior Football League.

Hurting physically and perhaps a little psychologically after a 39-2 loss at the hands of Renfrew Trojans last Sunday, Dolphins have learned that their only victory of the season in a 1-2 record has been scratched.

Dolphins, who had previously won only one game in five seasons, outplayed Surrey Rams in the opener but suffered a narrow 7-6 loss in the final minutes. Then the Victoria club rebounded for a 36-12 romp over Vancouver Blue Bombers.

Since then, however, the Bombers have folded and league officials have ruled the victory doesn't count.

That means Dolphins will carry a 0-2 record into their first home game of the season against Richmond Raiders at 2 p.m. Sunday in Royal Athletic Park.

Coach Brian Gingell, a little upset with the loss of the two points, said he expected to have 34 players dressed for the game but added there were a lot of injuries as a result of the game against Renfrew.

Additions of players from Blue Bombers are expected to add greater depth to all the Mainland clubs in what is now a five-team league.

Vancouver Meralomas and defending-champion Trojans have demonstrated they once again hold the balance of power in the league. Dolphins will have to beat out Surrey and Richmond to gain the third and final playoff berth.

North Shore Cougars, who played in the league last season, didn't start league play this year because of a lack of coaches.

Program Honors Speedway Builder

Orton Ker will be gunning for a fourth successive victory in the super-stock main event of a special celebration program shared with stock cars Saturday night at Western Speedway.

The night's racing is being dedicated to Andy Cottyn, who almost singlehandedly built the Langford oval 25 years ago.

Cottyn will be on hand to present the Andy Cottyn Appreciation Trophy to the winner of the stock car main event.

Ker's winning streak has boosted him into third place in super-stock driver standings, just 35 points behind Larry Pollard but 279 behind first-place Jim Caudwell.

Gordie Stone continues to lead the stock car drivers with 1,041 points while Al Miller is second at 790.

Green's Right For Irish Open

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland (AP) — Defending champion Hubert Green shot a five-under-par 67 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the Irish Open golf championship.

Green was one stroke ahead of Manuel Ballesteros of Spain and two ahead of a group that included fellow-American Lanny Wadkins, Christy O'Connor of Ireland, Bob Charles of New Zealand and Garry Marsh of Australia.

CITES RELIGIOUS REASONS FOR PUBLIC APOLOGY

Don Makes Up to Steve

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pitcher Don Sutton, saying he wanted to "clear the air," apologized Thursday for the wrestling incident with teammate Steve Garvey of Los Angeles Dodgers.

Sutton's voice was choked as he read a prepared statement about last Sunday's clubhouse scuffle in New York prior to a Dodgers-Mets National League baseball game. He cited religious reasons for the public apology.

"I thank God for Steve Garvey and for the role God has let him play in my life and now I can thank him (God) for the Washington Post article and for the disagreement in New York," said Sutton, who read from the statement but would not answer questions.

". . . together, they have helped to point out to me very vividly that as long as my life isn't right, then I can't be a good example for anyone."

Sutton also said in the statement that he had thought of little else since the incident, adding:

"I've tried to figure out why this all had to happen. And the only possible reason I can find is that my life isn't being lived according to what I know as a human being and a Christian to be right.

Saying he had learned some valuable lessons, Sutton continued:

"I want to clear the air of all the negative stuff that I, most of all, have helped to cause. I hope to create an atmosphere here with the Dodgers that we can concentrate on the important objectives at hand."

The incident occurred after Garvey had seen an excerpt from a Sutton interview printed in the Post.

In that interview, Sutton was quoted as saying, "All you ever hear about on our team is Steve Garvey, the all-American boy. Well, the best player on this team—and we all know it—is Reggie Smith. Reggie doesn't go out and publicize himself. He doesn't smile at the right people or say the right things. Reggie's not a facade or a Madison Avenue image."

Following Sutton's apology Thursday in the Dodger clubhouse, Garvey said he would get together with the pitcher to talk things over.

Pate and Gilbert On a Salvage Job

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Pate and Gibby Gilbert are looking to salvage winless seasons this week in the $250,000 Hall of Fame golf tournament.

"Look out for this week," said Gilbert after firing a solid, four-under-par 67 and tying Pate for the first-round lead Thursday.

"I've only told you that once before," Gilbert said. "And that was at Memphis (Tenn.). Just remember what I'm telling you."

It was at Memphis that Gilbert scored his second career victory.

"I've had scores low enough to win several times this year, but everytime I get there, somebody shoots the lights out," he said. "But this is the week."

Like Pate, Gilbert had a chance to win last week's Westchester Classic until playing poorly in the last round.

"I've been playing well for quite a while now," said Pate, a former U.S. Open titleholder and a playoff loser in the recent PGA National Championship. "My game has been pretty consistent."

Over his last seven holes, it was spectacular. He played those holes six-under-par with birdie, eagle, birdie, par, par, birdie, birdie.

"I don't know what it was," mused Pate. "Maybe it was just everybody saying how tough the golf course was. I kept telling myself, 'It can't be THAT tough.'"

The old No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club, one of America's finest, was punished by Hale Irwin's 20-under-par winning total a year ago and this time the sponsors decided to "restore" it.

Some tees were lengthened. The fairways are narrower. The rough is up.

"The rough," said Howard Twitty, "is consistent. Consistently bad."

Twitty and Thompson, along with Tom Kite and Greg Powers, were tied for third at 69. Cesar Sanudo had an ace with a two-iron shot on the sixth hole and headed a group of eight at 70, the only others to break par.

Arnold Palmer matched par 71. Tom Watson shot 72. Irwin fought his way to a 73. Leading money winner Andy Bean carded a 74.

TAIWAN IN FINAL

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Shortstop Chao-Min Pan hit a three-run double and Wen-Chu Pan allowed one hit and struck out 13 to power Pintung, Taiwan, to a 3-0 victory Thursday over Santo Domingo, of the Dominican Republic, in the semi-finals of baseball's Little League World Series.

In an earlier game, Jeff Saenger shifted from first base to the mound and pitched hitless relief to preserve a 6-5 victory for Danville, Calif., over Lexington, Ky.

The game was the second shutout in the series for the team representing Pin-Kuang Little League and Taiwan's 19th straight series victory since 1970. The team also has yet to make an error in series play this year.

Oil Kings' Coach

EDMONTON (CP) — Wayne Tennant and Don Scott have been named coach and manager, respectively, of the new Edmonton Oil Kings Western Canada Hockey League club.

It is Tennant's first major-junior coaching post. He headed the city's Cessco midget AA team for nine years, coaching the club to three city league and three northern Alberta championships and one provincial title.

Scott was in the old Oil Kings organization for 10 years before moving onto to manage Salt Lake Golden Eagles minor pro team.

Oil Kings also named Harvey Henkel as chief scout.

Mearns Seventh

ROTTERDAM (Reuter) — Jan Kowalczyk of Poland won the Erasmus Prize event in the second day of an international equestrian competition.

Kowalczyk completed a clear round in 60.6 seconds to finish ahead of Gerry Mullins of Ireland, who also had a clear round but in 64.6 seconds. Kevin Bacon of Australia was third.

Howard Produces Another Century

LONDON (Reuter) — Geoff Howarth scored an unbeaten 105 and led New Zealand into a powerful position in the third and final cricket test against England at Lord's on Thursday.

By the close of the first day, New Zealand stood 280 for five, having had one of their best days of the entire series. England won both previous tests by large margins.

It was Horwarth's third century in four tests against England, but he needed some help from the England fielders. He was dropped three times—twice by England captain Mike Brearley.

There was some joy for two England players. Newcomer John Emburey, the Middlesex off-spinner, had opener Bruce Edgar caught at short leg with his fourth ball in test cricket.

And non-stop, all-rounder Ian Botham took three of the other wiickets to finish the day with three for 76.

Softballers At Bat For Accident Victim

Wayne Bull, a 22-year-old laborer who was one of the leading players with Prairie Inn of the Sidney League, is now paralyzed and bedridden at Shaughnessy Hospital in Vancouver following a tragic accident Aug. 5 at Comox Lake near Courtenay.

Bull and several other Prairie Inn players were swimming at night when the accident occurred.

"Nobody is really sure what happened," said Prairie Inn manager Don Boone. "We didn't see it happen but found him floating by a submerged stump. We think he dived and struck his head on the stump."

Bull was pulled from the water and subsequently rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital in Courtenay and then flown to Vancouver.

He suffered a broken neck but doctors aren't certain about the extent of his spinal injuries.

It was the second bout of tragedy to befall the Bull family this year. While travelling in Europe 10 weeks ago, his father was killed and his mother paralyzed from the waist down in an automobile accident.

Wayne had since been the main support for three sisters aged 18, 16 and 14.

To help defray the medical expenses and help provide Wayne with the equipment needed to help him function better, the three leagues have scheduled a series of benefit functions.

An all-star tournament involving the three leagues is scheduled Sunday at Sanscha Park with games at 10 a.m., 12 noon, 2 and 4 p.m. Money will be raised through draws and raffles.

In addition, the three leagues will hold a dance starting at 8 p.m. Sept. 30 at Sanscha Hall in Sidney. Tickets will be $10 per couple.

Anyone wishing to make a contribution to the Wayne Bull Benefit Fund may do so at any branch of the Saanich Peninsula Credit Union.

AROUND OUR SHORES

One of the worst examples of bureaucratic blindness has taken place on Salt Spring Island where high school teacher Lawrie Neish's boat building program has been scrapped for "budgetary considerations".

More than 50 Sabot dinghies have been built by dozens of kids from elementary to high school age under Lawrie's guidance.

It was the inspiration and help given by this kindly sailing Scot that resulted in the formation of the Salt Spring Island Sailing Club.

His building program was carried out partly on school time but mostly during the students' free time, the boats being entirely financed by the youngsters or their parents.

The wood-working part of construction was done as part of the school program then the boats were fiberglassed in the evenings or on the weekends, using a school building.

Lawrie's first problem came with the formation of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. which took a poor view of him fiberglassing on school property although nobody bothered to check. If they had they would have found Lawrie and his students worked near a large open door and there was a fan specially rigged to take the fumes outside.

The final straw was notification that the program was to be cut unless Lawrie could produce an on-going program.

Anyone who knows Lawrie and the fine breed of young sailors he's helped produce will agree this was the finest on-going program the island has ever known.

When you think of the money that was poured into the Tall Ship fiasco that resulted in the glimpse of only one under sail, you wonder where bureacrats keep their brains.

A happier story comes from north Pender Island where Frank and Beryl Pardey are enjoying a reunion with their son and daughter-in-law, Larry and Lin, after an absence of nearly 10 years.

Larry and Lin sailed home on the weekend in their 24-foot cutter Seraffyn, which they built in Newport, Calif. Their around-the-world wanderings are well known to those who've read theur articles or their book, Cruising in Serrafyn.

Their last leg home was a 19-day trek from Japan.

Their gutsy little boat has no engine nor can they send radio messages. In the Strait of Juan de Fuca, however, they managed to get a message through to Larry's parents, courtesy of a passing fishermen.

The Pardeys and Lin's parents, Sam and Marion Zatkin of Los Angeles, met the wanderers at Race Rocks in the Pardeys' 27-foot cutter, Marie Rose, and escorted them the rest of the way.

Larry and Lin plan to stay at Pender for about a couple of months and Larry is looking forward to reviving old friendships with sailing friends he knew before he decided to go offshore.

Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry was the over-all winner Wednesday in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's race for Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats with handicaps of 3.0 or under in spite of a series of events that would have dampened the enthusiasm of many a rag-hauler.

Winds gusting up to 30 made the race an exciting one with Danish Pastry cornering most of it. Soren went over the side before the start of the race but carried on anyway. Before Danish Pastry had gone over the finish line she had also broken her tiller extension and popped her spinnaker. Nobody begrudged Soren that win. After Danish Pastry came Paul Longridge's Saga and Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer.

The top three PHRF boats with 3.0 or over handicaps were Gary Cooney's Hocus, Larry Shorter's Kila Kila and Mike Balderstone's Menos.

The first three Cal 20s to finish were Don North's Polaris, Cec Miles' La Galatea and Cec Biden's Pegasus. Cave Teece won in Lasers, runner-up being Charles Simpson.

Sailerette skippers and crews of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will have their Weather-or-Knot series on Sunday, switching boats for each race. Things get under way at 10 a.m.

U.K. NUCLEAR PLANTS SHUT

LONDON (AP) — The defence ministry yielded to union fears over worker overdoses of radioactivity Thursday and closed all plutonium facilities at Britain's atomic research plant indefinitely.

The ministry decision followed positive plutonium overdose findings last week on three women who worked in the establishment's laundry. Nine male workers also appear to have received overdoses but further tests were scheduled to verify the findings.

Closure of the plutonium section of the atomic research facility will have no effect on Britain's operational nuclear capability, a ministry spokesman said, but added: "There is no doubt that important development programs will inevitably be delayed."

The plant at Aldermaston is Britain's main production facility for nuclear weapons, chiefly warheads for Polaris missiles that arm the country's nuclear submarines.

Polaris submarines are a strategic link in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's European defence network.

The spokesman said several hundred people would be effected by the plutonium section's closure, but they will be given other jobs outside the plutonium establishment. All will continue working at Aldermaston in other capacities.

He declined to estimate how long the plutonium facilities will be shut down. He said the step was taken because of trade union concerns and anxieties about potential contamination danger to workers.

Hua Keeps On Offensive

SKOPJE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Chinese leader Hua Kuo-Feng visited the capital of the Yugoslav Macedonian Republic on Thursday in what some diplomats saw as a stone tossed at three Communist targets: Albania, Bulgaria and the Soviet Union.

Hua's Macedonian tour, in the fifth day of his nine-day visit to Yugoslavia, coincided with escalating criticism from Moscow, including allegations that Peking plans to shake the Kremlin's influence in the Communist world.

The 57-year-old Hua was warmly welcomed by crowds lining the streets as he was driven from Skopje airport to a series of ceremonial stops. Tanjug, the Yugoslav news agency, estimated the crowd at 150,000.

Welcoming banners were strung up and folk groups danced in the streets, but there appeared to be no special effort to demonstrate local nationalism to exploit Hua's presence in Macedonia. This appeared in line with Yugoslav insistence that Hua's visit to the region is not aimed even obliquely at Russia or Bulgaria, or any third country.

A Yugoslav-Bulgarian dispute recently has flared anew over Macedonian territorial and minority rights. Macedonians live on both sides of the border.

Hua's presence in Skopje could be construed by the Bulgarians and the Soviets, Bulgaria's closest ally, as an expression of support for Yugoslav claims.

"However much Yugoslavia wants to maintain stable relations with the Soviet Union, Hua's Macedonian visit is inevitably bothering the Bulgarians, and by extension, the Russians," said one Western diplomat in the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade.

Added another: "The Yugoslavs are of course privately delighted that Hua accepted to go to Macedonia. In turn the Chinese are delighted to oblige because it pleases the Yugoslavs and because it irks both the Russians and Bulgarians with whom Peking's relations are currently very low."

Slander Case Closed

MOSCOW (WP) — The Soviet government closed the slander case against two American correspondents here Thursday amid indications that it intends to bring to trial an American businessman charged with currency speculation.

By confining itself to "a warning" to the two correspondents, the Soviet Foreign Ministry said it was acting in the interest of "Soviet-American relations." It was the mildest form of reprimand to the two Americans who were convicted of slandering Soviet state television but who defied a court order to print retractions of their allegedly slanderous articles.

In closing the case, Soviet authorities in effect acknowledged their failure to establish a precedent for legal action against Western reporters whose articles they find objectionable.

But the unprecedented libel suit brought by an agency of the Soviet government against Craig Whitney of The New York Times and Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun demonstrated the extent to which the authorities here are prepared to go in exerting pressure against unfavorable reporting.

The outcome of the slander case, which was a source of additional tensions in Soviet-American relations, represents a compromise allowing both sides to claim victory.

The two newspapers were successful in blocking Moscow's attempts to interfere in Western newsroom affairs.

THE STORY OF

THE HOT DOG VENDOR

There was once a man who lived by the side of the road and sold hot dogs.

He sold very good hot dogs.

He put up signs along the highway and advertised in the newspaper telling how good they were.

He stood on the side of the road and cried:

"Buy a hot dog, Mister?"

And people bought.

He increased his meat and bun orders.

He bought a bigger stove to take care of his trade.

He finally got his son home from college to help him out.

But then something happened.

His son said, "Father, haven't you been listening to the news and reading the papers?"

There's a big recession.

The domestic situation is worse."

Whereupon the father thought

"Well, my son's been to college, he listens to the radio and watches TV and he reads and he ought to know."

So the father cut down on his meat and bun orders, took down his signs and cancelled his newspaper ads.

And his hot dog sales fell overnight.

"You're right, son" the father said to the boy.

Nicaragua Rebels Gaining

Earthquake Aid Graft Opens Cracks in Somoza's Regime

By KAREN DEYOUNG
Washington Post

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — This week's daring assault on Nicaragua's national palace is a sharp escalation of an offensive launched last fall by guerrillas intent on overthrowing the government of President Anastasio Somoza.

The attack is also the single most spectacular operation in the sporadic 16-year history of the Sandinista Liberation Front, a homegrown guerrilla group named after a Nicaraguan general who died trying to prevent the 1933 ascension to power of Somoza's father, the patriarch of the 45-year-old regime.

While the attack may not signal the beginning of full-fledged revolution, it has already achieved the interim Sandinista goals of putting Somoza visibly on the defensive and focusing world attention on the Nicaraguan conflict.

Most significantly, it is likely to have at least tacit support from a large percentage of the rapidly growing anti-Somoza movement that in recent months has thrown the guerrillas, business leaders, peasants, intellectuals and students into a shaky alliance. Their only common goal is Somoza's ouster.

For years, the Sandinistas were no more than a bothersome thorn in the side of the Somozas. Small in number and hazy in ideology, they confined their activities primarily to Nicaragua's mountainous northeast, where they were generally ostracized by fearful peasants and successfully kept on the run by Somoza's National Guard.

Their support outside of student groups was almost non-existent.

Midway in their history, the Sandinistas were riddled with factionalism, and divided into three groups with goals ranging from pure nationalism and the simple removal of Somoza to the installation of a Marxist-Leninist government.

Next to Tuesday's attack, the Sandinistas' most widely publicized operation came in 1974, at a time when the government was confident of their weakness and had become complacent in its ability to control their activities.

The guerrillas broke into a party in an upper-class Managua home from which the then-U.S. ambassador Turner Shelton had just left. Taking numerous hostages, they eventually exchanged them for a multimillion-dollar ransom and a flight to Cuba for them and several formerly jailed compatriots.

An enraged Somoza subsequently delared a state of siege, giving the National Guard special powers and virtually eliminating all political and press opposition.

With its anti-guerrilla zeal inflamed, the National Guard began a series of operations in the northeastern mountains that over a period of years allegedly resulted in the indiscriminate murder and disappearance of hundreds of peasants.

It was not until early 1976, however, that reports of such operations began filtering outside the country and Somoza came under heavy criticism from human rights abuses. While the United States had always considered Somoza a staunch anti-Communist ally, the Carter administration began to cool on the relationship and gradually cut U.S. military assistance.

The U.S. pressure grew until Somoza lifted the state of siege last September, gradually liberalized his government and promised to withdraw himself and his family from power after elections scheduled for 1981.

By late September, however, non-guerrilla opposition to Somoza had begun to spread. Many Nicaraguans place its real beginning in 1972, when an earthquake devastated the country. Substantial sums of international aid flowed into Nicaragua, and much of the funds ended up in Somoza's coffers through his extensive ownership of Nicaraguan land and businesses. For the first time, local businesmen said, Somoza blatantly denied them their accustomed cut in the riches.

Last summer, when a near-fatal heart attack put Somoza out of commission for several months, many Nicaraguans who previously had seen no possibility of his removal seriously began to envision a Nicaragua without him.

When the long-dormant Sandinistas launched a series of surprise attacks against scattered National Guard garrisons in October, many former opponents applauded them.

By that time, the guerrillas, who had set up operations not only in Cuba but also Costa Rica, Mexico and Honduras, had swelled in number. They included many of the children of the business and educated elite whose support Somoza had long counted on.

Smoldering resentment against Somoza exploded in January with the assassination on a Managua street of opposition newspaper editor Pedro Joaquin Chamorro.

While the case remains unsolved, and there has been no substantial evidence that Somoza ordered the murder, most Nicaraguans seem to feel he was responsible.

Since the Chamorro assassination, Nicaragua has been torn by a virtual civil war, with the increasingly widespread opposition demanding Somoza's resignation and the president adamantly refusing to leave.

Increasingly frustrated, even some of the most pacifist elements of the opposition have begun to look at the Sandinistas — a group that now includes many of their children — as the only answer.

HELMET MANUFACTURER SUED

BALTIMORE (AP) — A deaf-mute youth who was paralysed in a high school football game has filed an $11.5-million lawsuit against the manufacturer of his helmet.

The suit, filed in federal court on behalf of Gary Bradshaw, claims the defective design of the helmet was responsible for his injuries.

The youth was playing for the high school division of the Maryland School for the Deaf when he was injured in a game at Brunswick, Md., the suit said.

The suit blamed his injuries, which resulted in permanent paralysis, on the defective design of the Model HA91 football helmet, manufactured by Ridell Inc., of Des Plaines, Ill.

The suit alleged the manufacturer had prior notice of the dangers of the helmet, but continued to offer it for sale.

Bertram Goldstein, the youth's lawyer, said there has been one lawsuit in Florida and several in the U.S. Midwest resulting from injuries to players wearing helmets made by the same manufacturer.

Antibody Lack Diabetes Key?

BOSTON (UPI) — A report published Thursday indicates doctors may be correct in assuming that diabetes in children is caused by a malfunction in the body's disease-fighting system.

The body produces millions of different antibodies. Each is programmed to recognize and destroy a specific foreign invader. But scientists believe some diseases such as diabetes may be caused by antibodies which mistakenly attack a person's own cells.

According to a report by scientists in the New England Journal of Medicine, researchers have found indications the body's immunological system makes a specific type of antibody which seeks out the cells that produce insulin and locks onto their surface.

Those cells are called islet cells and are found in the pancreas.

Games Ploy Aired

LONDON (AP) — The government-backed British Sports Council has agreed to consider a resolution urging the government to discuss with other governments a possible mass withdrawal from the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

But Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said. "We could not move the Games elsewhere even if we wanted to — unless Moscow failed to comply with IOC rules in the staging of the Games."

France Retreats

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Pakistan announced Wednesday that France has backed out of an agreement to provide it with a nuclear reprocessing plant that would produce plutonium suitable for use in manufacturing an atomic bomb.

The announcement represents a major triumph for the Carter administration's nuclear non-proliferation policy.

The administration is hoping for an additional piece of good news in the next couple of weeks in the form of a decision by South Africa to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

France's decision is expected to renew pressure on West Germany, which has sold a pilot nuclear reprocessing facility to Brazil.

Fishing Quota Proposal Aired

POWELL RIVER (CP) — A radical new system in which fishing rights would be allocated in a similar fashion to timber rights was discussed here Thursday by academics and government fishing officials.

There currently are no curbs on the number of fish any individual licensed fisherman can catch, although there are growing restrictions to cut back the number of new fishermen entering the industry.

Under the new allocation proposal, a fisherman would be told the number of fish he could catch of each type, and would be required to stop when the quota was filled.

Dr. James Crutchley, fisheries economist with the University of Washington, suggested the allocation system Thursday.

It is a proposal also favored in the past by others, including Dr. Peter Pearse, co-ordinator of the University of British Columbia's (UBC) natural resource economics program and a moving force behind the symposium here.

Pearse said government officials — faced with a whole new set of economic and social repercussions brought on by the new 200-mile fishing limites — must come up with new fishing policies and are interested to explore new alternatives to ensure fair distribution of the fishing resources.

He stressed that the symposium was strictly an informational gathering and has no policy-making function, however, he noted there are precedents for allocation systems in other fields such as timber, water and grazing rights.

The symposium, co-sponsored by UBC and the federal fisheries department, was attended by 36 experts and government officials from the United States, Britain, Australia, and Canada.

Pearse said Canada has attracted enormous interest from fishing countries of the world, because it was the first country to restrict entry to its commercial fisheries when it instituted the limited-entry salmon fishing program on the West Coast 10 years ago.

Not Smoking Worth $6,500

MOSCOW (AP) — A trade union in the mining region of the Soviet Ukraine has instituted a $6,500 prize for any shop or section whose workers all quit smoking, the Soviet news agency Tass said.

The agency said workers receive anti-smoking lectures before each shift and that management has quit smoking as an example to the workers.

Four Americans Dead In Cessna Wreckage

Four Americans were found dead Thursday on Vancouver Island in the wreckage of their Cessna 185 single-engine float plane, a search and rescue spokesman said today.

The wreckage was found by a Canadian armed forces' Twin Otter at 4:55 p.m.

The spokesman said the plane was located near Rivers Inlet, 70 kilometres north of Port Hardy.

The victims were identified as Earl Lahmeyer, the pilot, Ken Peasly and Don Bates — all of Seattle — and Bob Avis of California.

The plane went missing Monday on a flight from Rivers Inlet to Friday Harbor on San Juan Island.

The search has been called off for Don Bell, 54, of Vancouver, missing after leaving Tsawwassen 4 p.m. Wednesday in a 14-foot catamaran to go fishing.

His disappearance is now being treated as a missing person case by the Delta police.

Cigarette Responsible For Fatal Fire

NANAIMO (CP) — A house fire that killed a seven-year-old boy in this Vancouver Island community Monday was started by a misplaced cigarette, assistant-fire chief Bud Dumont said today.

Dumont said the family of Jamie Larson had been playing games until late Sunday during which time the adults were smoking.

About 1½ hours after they retired, the fire department was notified. This would have been enough time for heat to build up and blow out the windows, he said.

The boy had been led to the front door of the burning house and told to leave, Dumont said, but apparently he panicked and ran back in to find his family. He was overcome in the home's kitchen.

Six others in the home escaped the fire and discovered him missing. Attempts to rescue him failed.

Tweed Suit Next Rage?

Diane von Furstenberg (right) tries on new velvet blazer over pink dress while model at left shows new "body beautiful" style designer thinks will replace her popular wrap dress.

By BERNADINE MORRIS

Diane Von Furstenberg has changed her image.

The sexy wrapped dress in printed jersey that managed to flatter a multitude of women of different shapes and sizes — 1,300,000 have been sold since she started in business with it eight years ago — is still in her collection. But she has gone on to other things.

Tailored suits, for example. Her favorite is in tweed, with a two-button mannish jacket and a narrow skirt.

"I can't wait until it hits the stores," she says. "I think it will be as big as the wrapped dress."

Velvet blazers are another addition. Like the tailored suit jackets they can be worn over the print dresses. The designer has been dressing like that herself for sometime.

"I always try to do in my collection what I like for myself," she says. "I'm a woman who makes clothes for other women. That is my biggest asset."

Women have changed enormously in the last few years, Miss Von Furstenberg believes.

"They used to take a designer's word for everything," she says. "Now they're more self-confident. They know what they want, what looks flattering on them. They will not follow any designer — or any fashion — blindly."

Von Furstenberg has also changed the nature of her business. She has recently arranged with the Puritan Fashion Corporation to do the manufacturing and the selling of her styles, "so I can concentrate my energy on the designing."

Other licencees produce her furs, raincoats, shoes and lingerie.

She has bought out her partners in her cosmetics company and now owns it herself. She will aim for closer coordination between her cosmetics and her fashions.

"I want to design clothes the way I pack my suitcase," she explained. "I always travel very light — and I always have more than enough to wear when I get there."

Typically, she would pack two dresses, a pair of pants, a blazer and some silk pajamas. So far, she has not been able to produce the silk pajamas, but she plans to add them soon.

"I never wear long dresses — I wear silk pants instead. They work whenever it's a black-tie evening, they're far more comfortable and you can wear them around the house," she says.

Looking Into Bottled Water

By LYNNE GORDON

caveat emptor

There's been a dramatic increase in the sales of bottled water in recent years reflecting the concern that many consumers have about the destructive effects of widespread pollution, in all of its many forms, on the quality of public drinking water.

But at the same time consumers are also asking some hard questions about the products — such as bottled water — that are being widely promoted as today's alternative to ordinary, old-fashioned tap water.

Some of the answers that come up when you start to look at water in all its forms, and make comparisons, may surprise you.

I'll start with two of the most common questions. First of all:

Sometimes bottled water is called spring water, sometimes it's called mineral water. What's the difference?

There really isn't a big difference between them. The main thing is that there's a higher concentration of minerals in mineral water than there is in spring water.

Still another form of bottled water is distilled water, which is made by heating water to produce steam — which then condenses to produce a form of 'soft' water that has just about all the minerals taken out of it. Distilled water has a flat taste and lacks the balance of minerals that you find in water in its natural form.

You start by taking a close look at the label on the bottles.

First you find the brand name.

Somewhere close to it, you'll see the 'product name,' which indicates what's inside the bottle.

If it says 'spring water,' look for the fine print elsewhere on the label that indicates the amount of mineral salts that are dissolved in the water. It should also indicate the total fluoride iron content.

If you see these listed, you're on the right track. That's because, by government regulation, a product labelled as either spring water or mineral water has to list the total mineral salt content, as well as the total fluoride iron content.

But what if the product name doesn't say it's spring or mineral water? What if it's labelled 'table water,' 'purified drinking water' or simply 'bottled water' instead?

According to the present regulations, a bottler selling spring or mineral water can choose to label it as, say, purified drinking water, instead of calling it spring water or mineral water. But on the other hand, a product labelled as purified drinking water could in fact also come from a municipal water supply, and have the chlorine from the municipal water-treatment plant removed through use of a carbon filter.

In other words, with something that's labelled as purified drinking water or table water, you could be getting spring water — or you could be getting tap water that's gone through a filter (meaning there won't be any telltale taste of chlorine to it).

There's nothing in current regulations of the health protection branch of the Department of Health and Welfare to prevent a bottler from running water from a municipal water supply through a carbon filter and selling the product in health food stores, as long as it's not labelled as 'spring water' or 'mineral water.'

Keep in mind also that the brand name can include a word such as 'spring' or 'mineral' in it but the ingredient can still be filtered tap water what really counts is the information in the product name.

If you have any doubts about what you're buying, check the label for the name and address of the bottler, and phone or write for further information. If you're still confused, contact your regional office of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs or the health protection branch of Health and Welfare Canada. These two departments look after different aspects of the labelling regulations. Another source of information is your local public health unit.

Chance for Children in Outdoors

elizabeth forbes

It's an annual project, sponsored by the British Columbia Youth Parliament (BCYP).

A program that sees boys and girls between the ages of eight and 12, who otherwise would not have such an opportunity, given a week to enjoy outdoor living.

I'm talking about Camp Phoenix, organized and conducted by members of the BCYP (themselves in the age bracket 16 to 21) as part of their on-going program based on the slogan, Youth Helping Youth.

This year's camp starts Sunday and will continue all next week at the George Pringle Memorial site on Shawnigan Lake.

"It's going to be an exciting challenge," says Christine Eidt, a member of the BCYP Cabinet and one of the planning committee.

"There will be 56 kids, the maximum we can take. They are coming from as far away as Trail and Kamloops, also from the Vancouver and Victoria areas."

Those from the mainland will gather in Vancouver where they will be billeted overnight and taken across to Camp Phoenix in buses provided by MacMillan, Bloedel Ltd.

Youth Parliament counsellors, all volunteers, plan to be in camp early Saturday for a final briefing.

"They will be shown pictures of the young campers and health forms that have been filled out for each one," Christine explained.

"In this way they will become familiar with as many angles of the week's program as possible before the campers arrive."

The BCYP works for maximum proficiency through regional districts and regional officers. And it is in these regions that efforts are made to find boys and girls who will benefit from a camp experience.

Social service and human resources people are contacted and from them names are gathered.

"We look for youngsters who have had no experience of camp life and who wouldn't have an opportunity to do so unless they come to our camp," is the way Chris puts it.

"Once we have the names, we visit the homes and find out if a parent or parents would like their youngsters to attend the camp.

"Then, we make a final choice in consultation with our counsellors."

Plans for this year's camp started last autumn soon after the BCYP cabinet was named for the 1977-78 year.

In June, the 20 or more members who had volunteered to help in various capacities met in Vancouver for a weekend training session.

They were given talks by knowledgeable people on waterfront care, crafts, first aid, the stars and on problems that might surface during the week.

Food details were planned and a waterfront director, nurse and cook named as the only paid staff.

"Remuneration they get is really very small in comparison to what they do," Chris says. "They give far more than they get, in time and expertise."

A day-to-day program was outlined at the June session and has now been finalized.

Sunday the youngsters will be shown around the camp, allotted to their cabins and "perhaps have a campfire, sing-song in the evening."

Out-trips have been arranged. They include trail hikes, climbing Mt. Baldy, exploring little islands in Shawnigan Lake and a visit to the Cheema dairy farm. (Two of the Cheema family, Tarsame and Chakaur, are members of the youth parliament.)

There will be a western evening with a special dinner and a square dance conducted by Victoria's Al Ritchie.

Also planned is a backwards dinner, starting with desert and followed by a program around a campfire.

Christmas will be celebrated next Thursday, commencing with a sunrise service and ending with a special dinner, a tree, gifts and Santa Claus.

Tuesday evening has been named Phoenix Night, when the history and background of the camp, started first in 1968, will be given by members of the present BCYP Senate.

Linda Reid, Vancouver, BCYP minister of extra-sessional affairs, is in charge of this year's camp.

Sue Hunter, Premier of the Youth Parliament, will be there throughout the week.

Victoria members on the planning committee with Miss Eidt are Susan Tabata and Anthony Gurr.

Postscript: An "extra special" event scheduled for Sunday afternoon will be the presence of British Columbia's new Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. Henry P. Bell-Irving, who has accepted an invitation to visit Camp Phoenix and have dinner with the boys and girls that night.

Victoria MP Alan MacKinnon has also accepted an invitation to visit the camp next week.

Footnote: Perhaps you are wondering how the BCYP finances this ambitious camp project and other youth activities.

Throughout the year its members sell bonds for small or large amounts to any person or any organization wishing to help. These bonds are tax deductible.

If you are interested in what these young men and women are trying to do and would like to have some of those bonds, get in touch with Christine Eidt. Her telephone number is 382-5592.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Blair Shaw, psychologist; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Dr. Shaw: I am 15 years old and think I love a very beautiful girl a grade behind me in school. My problem is that for the past 10 months in which I have felt this way, I have never met her in person.

She is very popular and I heard she has a nice personality. I am sure she knows who I am by name because I was well-known and respected at school. I feel very depressed and angry with myself because I hadn't the courage to speak of my feelings to her and must face two months of loneliness. I cannot forget her, yet I have a strong fear of rejection.

ANSWER: You seem to be in love with a dream. If you stick with it you can't help but be disappointed.

Either talk with her and see if she is interested or talk with yourself and decide whether you want a dream or a real friend in your life.

Sometimes we start a romance with a girl and, in our own mind, make her out to be the "ideal we always dreamed of." This has its problems, too. Eventually, reality comes to the top and we see her as she really is. Often this is a disappointment because she isn't as perfect as we were making her out to be in our mind.

Your dream is at a distance. Just be careful not to be too jolted if she doesn't react with terrific interest when you approach her. Remember that you have been building this dream while she didn't even know about it. If she got to know you and very gradually became aware of your interest, she may like you in the way you want. If she is "otherwise engaged," look at all those other girls around. You will likely be spending a lot of your life with one of those "others" in any case. We seldom marry our early sweethearts, but the early romance is great all the same — heartbreaks and all.

Dear Dr. Powell: I think it might be a good idea if you devoted one of your columns to Venereal disease.

Most teen-agers know the facts of life, but very few know the facts about VD. Perhaps if you could tell us about it, many teen-agers could be spared the agony of having it.

You should mention how VD is contracted, how it spreads, the symptoms, and what to do if you get it.

ANSWER: I have answered specific questions about venereal disease on a number of occasions. However many of the facts bear repeating again and again.

VD is a term for a group of diseases called venereal or sexually transmitted diseases. These diseases are spread from person to person through intimate contact, nearly always sexual contact. The spread is from an infected individual to another person through contact of the mucous membranes, which include the inside of the mouth, the genital tract and the rectum.

There are a number of these diseases but the two that are most common in Canada are gonorrhea and syphilis. Gonorrhea is far more common and it presents certain problems. The symptoms in the male include a discharge of pus with pain and burning on urination. The symptoms may be similar in the female but it is more usual for the female to experience no symptoms.

Because many women do not have symptoms it is extremely important that tests be carried out in a clinic or at the doctor's whenever contact has taken place with a person who has the disease.

With syphilis, the first sign is a small, painless ulcer which will heal up completely even without treatment. This is known as the primary stage. If the disease is undiagnosed or untreated, after a few weeks the secondary stage occurs. This may take the form of a rash.

The diagnosis of syphilis is made by examing the fluid of the primary ulcer and finding the oganism called a spirochaete.

Anyone who is concerned about VD or wants to be sure he or she is free of disease should go to a doctor or clinic for tests. These are done in confidence so that there is no worry about anyone finding out. There are clinics in hospitals and health departments.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am a 14-year-old girl with a common problem, but no answers. My problem is my parents.

It seems that lately everything I do is wrong. I get in trouble for the smallest things. I can't even play football without going through the third degree. However, my brothers, age 10 and 8 can go and come as they please.

My parents embarrass me in front of my friends. If I'm on the phone they yell at me to get off. I ask them to please stop but they tell me I spend too much time on the phone ayway.

It's not as if my marks are low or anything. I've always done well in school and I don't smoke or drink. And they get very upset if I hang around with different people. I am very confused and would like some help.

ANSWER: I quite agree that sometimes it is very difficult to get along with one's parents. This can happen for many reasons.

Sometimes the problem is with the parents — they may be having a difficult time in their relationship, or be worried about money, or be deeply concerned that their children will have problems.

Sometimes the children do not let the parents know what they are thinking, are experimenting with different forms of behavior and not communicating with their parents, or they are growing up faster than their parents think.

In your situation, I would suggest that your spend some time trying to understand what is happening with your parents.

You may also think about your own attitudes and behavior. Are you reacting and doing things that will make your parents proud of you?

If you cannot find any reasons for the difficult time you are having that you can change, then do some protective work. Let your friends know that your parents become upset if you talk too long on the telephone so you are going to limit the length of your calls. You may be surprised to find that many of your friends have the same problem.

I hope that you will be successful in helping your parents understand you — they will be missing a lot if they don't.

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

$30 Can Buy New Tires

Need new rubber for your car, truck or van? Got $30? You may be in luck, as Mother Earth reader Bob Sutter explains.

For the past nine years, I've turned a deaf ear to every advertisement for "sale-priced" tires that I've been exposed to because I know how to get top-quality treads for just $5 to $20 apiece. And I'm not talking about retreads or baldies, either.

How do I keep from paying $40 to $70 each for new tires? Simple. All I do is visit a few of the larger auto junkyards in the area and choose from hundreds of choice, nearly new tires that have been removed from damaged autos.

In four hours or so of "work" on a Saturday morning, I can save about $100 on rubber for my car. You, too, should be able to save at least that much.

Step one in finding used-tire bargains is locating the names and addresses of auto wrecking lots in your locale. I always call ahead to make sure the establishments in question save salvageable tires. The ones that don't, of course, aren't worth checking.

Next, it's time to don some old clothes and with a list of auto parts yards in hand, your exact tire size in mind and a knife in your pocket, head out for the closest "tire recycling centre."

Once you reach your destination, confronting 500 or 600 tires can be anxiety-provoking without a plan of action. Therefore, bear in mind that in addition to looking for the right-sized rubber for your vehicle, you want check tires for the type of construction (radial or conventional-ply), eveness of wear, depth of tread and structural soundness. Let's consider each of these factors one by one.

TYPE OF CONSTRUCTION: Given a choice, I'll take steel-belted radials over conventional-ply tires any day. Radials hold the road better, have less rolling resistance and take twice as long to wear out as ordinary tires.

The only real drawback to radials is that they can't be used on the same vehicle with conventional-ply tires. So if you're shopping for more than one tire, by all means consider radials. They're really superior, but be sure to mount matched sets of either bias, or radial-ply tires on all four wheels of your vehicle.

EVENNESS OF WEAR: Immediately reject any tire whose tread is cupped, dished or bald along one edge, no matter how good the rubber is elsewhere. Why buy an unevenly worn tire when you don't have to? I've always been able to find matching sets of nearly-new tires after just a little searching.

TREAD DEPTH: The more tread a tire has left, the better. The quickest way to tell if a tire is worn out is to look for "wear bands." These are ridges built into and across the width of the tread at fixed intervals around the tire's circumference. When the rubber is worn down so the bands are exposed, the tire has had too much wear.

A more exacting check of the rubber left on a tire can be made by inserting a pocketknife's blade to the bottom of the tread, marking the spot where the top of the groove meets the blade, and withdrawing the knife. The distance from the tip of the blade to your mark should be at least 3/16 inch or whatever the legal minimum is for your area.

STRUCTURAL SOUNDNESS: Be sure to check all prospective purchases for structural effects. Examine the tire's exterior for cuts, bulges, punctures and/or over-all misshapenness. Run your hand gingerly along the inside of the tire, feeling for the same types of damage. Finally, invert a section of the tire to have a look at the interior surface. If no irregularities can be found, consider the tire sound.

Times Changing

EDMONTON (CP) — When railways converted to diesel from coal in the 1950s, Alberta's coal industry almost died, and re-establishment of the industry has taken almost 20 years. For example, in the 1960s, Luscar Ltd. operated the single largest mine in Alberta, producing 300,000 tons a year; current production is about five million tons a year.

Summer Brings French Bargains

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

PARIS — Despite the fact Paris has become incredibly expensive over the last few years, it is still possible for young travellers to find clean and reasonable accommodation in the $6 to $8 dollar-a-night range. I know because that's what I'm getting by on here.

The Summer Youth Welcome in Paris program supplies both information and an accommodation booking service until Sept. 25. Through five branch offices set up here, the program will help you book any of 4,000 beds available in youth centres. Many of these centres are actually student residences available during the French school summer vacation. I wound up with a clean single room including breakfast at a downtown student residence for $8 a night. If you wish to share to cut costs, it's possible to find one for as little as $6.

For those travelling by train there is an office located in North Station, (Gare du Nord) situated near the arrivals platform, Tel 285.86.19. If you're flying into Paris you can find one at the Orly South Airport, near the customers section.

But lineups are longest at railway stations and airports, so if you're in the downtown area you are better off to use one of the other three offices — 16 rue du Pont Louis Philippe, Paris 4, Tel. 278.04.82; 270 rue Saint Jacques, Paris 5 Tel. 325.06.20, or 49 rue Pierre Charron, Paris 8, Tel. 359.23.69.

If you would rather search on your own instead of taking a room on spec, there is another organization that is a big help. The CIDJ at 101, Quai Branly, Tel. 566.40.20, publishes a list of names and addresses of hotels, residence, youth hostels and YMCA's. The list is free and the office is not hard to find. if you use the subway, it is located near the Bir-Hakeim stop, or if you're walking, it's just five minutes from the foot of the Eiffel Tower.

Travelling by subway here in Paris is very convenient, but can be expensive. If you're going to use it, take advantage of the cut-rate price for purchasing 10 tickets at once.

The normal subway ticket costs two francs or about 50 cents. By purchasing 10 tickets at once from any subway ticket booth, the per-ticket cost is reduced to 32 cents.

If you're not a student but have the Federation of International Youth Travel Organizations (FIYTO) card, use it anywhere that offers a special student rate. I've been using this card, available from Canadian Hostelling Association offices, since I got here and have always been given student discounts.

If you are planning on travelling farther in France and need maps or other information, also make a visit to the main French Tourist Office at 127 Ave des Champs-Elysees, a short walk from the Charles de Gaulle subway stop.

There are a number of other centres operating in France that offer youth accommodation assistance. it's always best to write ahead, if you can, but if you arrive without accommodation, I have listed several places you can phone to check on what's available. The majority of these centres operate year round.

Here they are by region:

THE ALPS

Foyer de Jeunes Travailleurs. Le Chateau-Rouge, 741000 Annemasse. Tel. (50) 38-04-16. Bed and breakfast from $5.50.

THE MEDITERRANEAN

Centre Mediterranean, Chemin des Oliviers, 06320 Cap d'Ail. Tel. (93) 06-81-54. Here there is an age restriction of 18 to 30. The cost per night is more expensive, about $14, but includes breakfast and one other meal, private showers and a nearby swimming pool.

Foyer International D'Accueil De Carcassonne, Quai riquet, 11000 Carcassonne. Tel. 25-75-51. Bed from $4.50. Bed and breakfast from $6.00.

Relais Internationaux de la Jeunesse, Avenue Scuderi, 06100 Nice. Tel. (93) 81-27-63. Bed and breakfast for $4.50.

Centre International (M.J.C.) Place Salengro, B.P. 127, 11192 Narbonne. Tel. (68) 32-01-00. Bed and breakfast from $5.25.

NORMANDY:

Maisonn des Cites Unies, 15 avenue Raymont-Poincare, 14390 Cabourg (this is about 200 km from Paris). Tel. (31) 91-26-65. Bed from $6.00. Bed and breakfast from $7.50.

C.A.R. Nouvel Horizon, Avenue de Valeuse, 14200 Jerouville. Tel. (31) 93-34-55. Bed from $4.50; bed and breakfast from $6.

Les Horizons, Boie verte, 27100 le Vaudreuill. Tel. (32) 59-01-18. Bed and breakfast from $8 with a nearby swimming pool and private showers.

Miss, Mrs. or Ms.? No Legal Restraints

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — For more than 20 years Ms. has appeared in secretarial handbooks as the suggested form of address for women whose marital status is unknown.

However, recent developments in women's rights have brought the little-known prefix out of obscurity. Women wishing to be recognized as individuals rather than as appendages of their husbands, or single women who don't wish to be classified in traditional forms, have adopted the prefix as their standard bearer, their rationale being if Mr. is sufficient to indicate male, then Ms., a combination of Miss and Mrs., is enough to distinguish female.

Experts say there are no legal requirements forcing a woman to use any prefix or adopt her husband's name upon marriage. It's a matter of personal preference.

Thomas Granger, a London matrimonial and family lawyer, said there are no legal problems with a woman using her maiden name or using either Miss, Mrs. or Ms. if she isn't using one or the other to conceal her identity for fraudulent purposes. However, it is illegal to have two names.

The only problem with married women keeping their maiden names occurs when a child is born, because then the woman must use her husband's name for registering the child. The law in Ontario demands that a child born to a married couple take the father's name or a hyphenated combination of the mother's maiden name and the father's name, with the father's name listed first.

If a woman adopted her husband's name upon marriage and then decided to return to her maiden name, she has the common law right to do so, although the procedure isn't standardized and some places might not realize women have the right to do it, said London lawyer Kathleen Chapman.

Miss Chapman, who married recently, said she is established with a law firm under her maiden name and everyone knows her by that name.

She said that when people who know a woman by her maiden name lose track of her, she's easier to find if she's kept her maiden name.

"The man I married has a very strong identity — we both have — within the community," she said. "I'm not prepared to merge my identity with his."

Lynne Gordon, chairman of the Ontario Council on the Status of Women, said she doesn't like any title before her name.

"A person's first name is the one that remains consistent throughout one's life. Lynne, that's me."

She said people get upset about the use of Ms. because they don't like to see changes in women's roles and they're reacting to women's refusals to be defined.

Some Progressive Conservative party members still rankle that leader Joe Clark's wife Maureen continues to use her maiden name, McTeer.

At the annual meeting of the Manitoba Progressive Conservative Association in February, one member introduced a motion to send Clark a resolution that his wife be known as Mrs. Joe Clark.

The resolution wasn't passed and Jodi White, director of communications for Clark, said the motion was met with catcalls.

Bio-dex

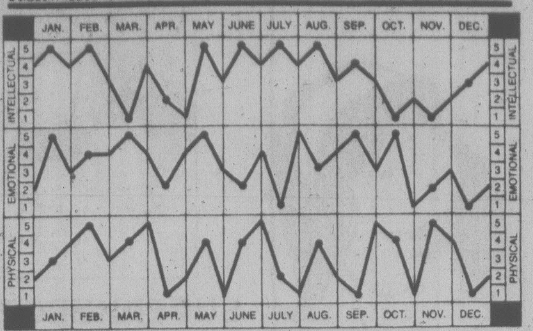
Your computerized biorhythm

© BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	Mental fatigue makes you physically tired. Spend a quiet evening at home and let your mind rest.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	Make a concerted effort to count your blessings instead of your sorrows. Self pity will only deplete your energy further.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	Don't let your enthusiasm over a new project be daunted by pessimistic acquaintances.

A recent in-depth study of American Korean War casualties showed that 85 percent were hit on days when their biorythms were critical. A moment's carelessness, a slow reaction — presumably these make all the difference in a shooting war. Soldiers are under orders, and can't avoid dangerous situations. Remember though that we civilians have more choice: we can avoid the highway 'battlefield' when our low Bio-dex slows our mental and physical reactions.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been divorced for three years. We have two very mature and sophisticated children, a boy, 9, and a girl, 11, who live with their mother.

I have a very lovely beach home and I have a ladyfriend living with me. My ex-wife is aware of this, but my children are not.

In our settlement, my wife agreed to let me have the children for two weeks in the summer. Now she refuses to send them to me because she doesn't want them to visit a father who is living "in sin" with another woman.

I say that children should be taught the realities of life, and I don't intend to put up a phony puritanical front. My landyfriend is not a cheap floozie. She's a fine European woman with sufficient charm and intelligence to hold a man without insisting on marriage, which is more than can be said of most North American women.

How can I make my ex-wife see it my way? I miss my children. — ME

DEAR ME: You probably can't, which is just as well. I agree with your ex-wife. Your "mature and sophisticated" children will learn the realities of life soon enough, so allow them their illusions awhile longer. And if you really "miss" your children, tell your "fine European ladyfriend" to get lost for a couple of weeks.

DEAR ABBY: Whoever said that boys like good girls is crazy.

I went out with a boy one night and he made advances. I told him where to get off. He didn't get mad, but he never asked me out again, and he was the one boy I really wanted to date.

Please don't say that a boy who would pull something like that isn't "nice." I haven't met a boy yet who doesn't take a girl out for what he can get. Because of this, a boy hardly ever asks me out twice. I am beginning to wonder about this good girl stuff. What does it prove? - UNDER AGE AND OVER DEVELOPED.

DEAR UNDER: Most "nice" boys still want "good" girls. The boys who drop you because you're "good" are only boys. Stay good, and one day a MAN will come along and make the waiting whorthwhile.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine let me know that she got out of a sickbed to attend my daughter's wedding. She coughed and sneezed and blew her nose during the whole time, and she looked very feverish and weak. She thought she was doing us all a big favor by coming, but I wish she had stayed home. She hugged and kissed me (and several others), and the following day I came down with the same symptoms she had at the wedding. I'm not saying she actually gave me something, but it was a strange coincidence.

Abby, you would be doing a tremendous public service to remind your readers that sick people belong at home.

I can't sign this for obvious reasons. — HILLS

DEAR HILLS: And to your letter, I say "Amen."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ON THE WAGON": No one need be conspicuous by his abstinence. Toss an olive, a cherry or a wedge of lemon into a glass of water, and no one will be any the wiser.

Painful Shingles Rate Sympathy

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Can you tell me a little more about "shingles"? I came down with a severe case a few months ago. I have no idea how I got it, but it was the most painful ailment I've ever had. I'm still not over it. I'm in the itching phase now. About how long will this part of the illness last? I would like to know more about shingles.— Mr. R.N.,

Dear Mr. N.:

Shingles is known by a number of names. The most common is "herpes zoster." It is also known as "zona" or "acute posterior ganglionitis."

It is caused by a special virus that closely resembles the one that causes chicken pox. The virus affects the central nerves which come out of the spinal cord. These nerves extend around the body to the skin surface.

Shortly after the infection sets in, a series of blisters, called "blebs," can be seen on the skin surface. The pain is intense. The diesease may occur at almost any age, but is more frequently seen after the age of 50. How one acquires it is not known. Sometimes it happens to people who are chronically ill or in a weak, debilitated condition.

After a week or two, the blisters on the skin surface begin to dry up, but that's not the end of the problem. Even when signs of the condition have almost disappeared, neuralgic pain persists and interferes with rest.

It is not well-known that itching itself is considered a form of pain. The itching may persist for a long time and there is no way to anticipate exactly when it will disappear.

It is interesting that one attack of herpes zostra usually brings with it some immunity. Rarely does a second attack occur.

The distribution of "shingles" depends on the part of the spinal cord that is involved. Anyone who has ever had shingles would sympathize with your distress. I hope that by the time this column is published your shingles will be a thing of the past.

If a child is born with a misshapen head does it mean it may have some kind of brain damage that will show up later? Our first grandchild was born that way a few days ago. The doctor says she is normal. Still we are worried. — Mrs. R.I.,

Dear Mrs. I.:

Parents and grandparents are often distressed when they first see the newborn child and notice that the head seems to be swollen or distorted. Unless there is a profound, readily recognized birth defect, such a poorly shaped head has no significance at all.

It does not, in any way, indicate brain damage nor is there any reason to expect that there will eventually be trouble because of it.

The bones of the skull of a newborn infant are elastic because they do not contain much calcium. It is for this reason that their heads often take on peculiar shapes as they pass through the birth canal. The pressures made on the soft skull only temporarily change its appearance.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal serves as another example of the fact that, if optimum results are to be obtained, deception in the play of the cards becomes mandatory. The hand came up in a team-of-four match.

Neither side vulnerable.
North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

When this deal was played the first time, South arrived at a four-spade contract via the bidding sequence described above. West's queen of clubs opening lead was covered by dummy's king and taken by East's ace. East returned a club to West's jack, after which West led a third club, South ruffing.

Dummy was then entered via the diamond ace, and a low trump was led, South putting up his king after East had followed suit with the four-spot. With the king winning, South now led the spade nine, which East was forced to win with his ace. Upon regaining the lead, South played the queen of trumps, picking up West's jack. The rest of the tricks belonged to South.

When the deal was replayed, the bidding was identical to that at the first table, as was the play to the first four and three-quarter tricks: South ruffed the third club lead, entered dummy via the diamond ace and led a trump. East followed with the four-spot and South played the king. But West did not mechanically follow suit with his lowest trump, the six. Instead he dropped the jack!

South, not being able to reach dummy again, now had a problem. Of course he recognized that West's jack of spades might well have been a false card. But then, couldn't West have been dealt the doubleton J-10? South concluded that the latter was the case — and his next play was the spade queen, hoping that West's (presumed) ten and East's ace would fall on the trick.

As is evident, South's hope did not materialize, for West played the six as East's ace won the trick. Simultaneously, West's ten of trumps became the highest trump left in the deck. And so declarer went down one trick.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast For Saturday, August 26
By Sydney Omarr

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Reunions, family gathering could be featured. Entertain at home, if possible. Do not enter vehicle with one who imbibes to excess. Play it safe — seek harmony, not controversy or danger. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in "crowded" scenario.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Define terms, avoid self-deception, deal with Pisces, Virgo persons. Accent on collections, possessions, income potential. You'll get time and money needed to perfect techniques, to test theory. What seemed lost will be recovered.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are strong — cycle is at peak and you'll get your way. Take lead — imprint style, bring priorities into focus, trust your own judgment. Capricorn, Cancer and the number 8 figure prominently. You're given more responsibility, authority — and money. Relationship is "very warm."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Association is tested — don't demand more than is reasonable. Aries, Gemini, Libra figure prominently. Secrets are revealed. You gain more than originally anticipated. You understand how to aid others — now do something to help yourself in substantial manner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on friendships, confidants — get to heart of matters concerning your own feelings. Be concerned with survival, progress, ultimate gain and profit. Chips fall your way. Key is to know it will happen — and to exude confidence.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You're able to hurdle red tape, to transform obstacles into steppingstones. Emphasis on career, superiors, ambition, ability to make room for yourself at more elevated position. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons play active roles in scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with long-range prospects. Diversify. Display adaptability. Deal with Gemini, Sagittarius persons. Have fun without giving in to too many foibles. Remember nutrition, health resolutions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Maintain moderate pace and policy. Study Libra message. One close to you — including partner or mate — is concerned with possessions, valuables, lost articles, finances. Be thorough. Do not attempt to storm the barricades.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on public relations, cooperative efforts, marital status. Gather information, make this a period of preparation. Change is favorable, but don't force issues. Defer to judgment of legal counsel, partner or mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go slow, take time to smell the flowers. You can afford now to play waiting game. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Employment, services, dependents — including pets — claim spotlight. Domestic tranquility follows recent "storm."

AQARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Aura of mystery, glamour surrounds you. You get what you want through indirect methods. See through sham, deception, false claims. Sweet nothings may be nice to listen to, but remain taciturn where emotional or financial commitments are concerned.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Bring together loose ends. Finish assignment, close transaction. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently — so does the number 9. One who seemed haughty is ready to make important concession. Key is to reinforce, to build on solid structure.

IF AUGUST 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY — you have learned "hard" lessons concerning money and responsibility. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. December could be your most memorable month of 1978, a year featuring gain through written material, change, creative endeavors, intensified relationship. You are capable, responsible, attractive and temperamental.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Frank looked down over the boy's shoulder. "That's our new phone number," he said. "What's the idea?"

"Nothing much, Dad," Les replied. "I just noticed the first digit is the sum of the other three, and the last three digits make double the number formed by the first two."

What was the number?

Thanks to F. C. Asbury, Toronto.

Bomb Defused In W. Germany

LONDON (AP) — British army security men defused a bomb found in a car Thursday night near a canteen building at Rheindahlen Camp, headquarters of the British Army of the Rhine in West Germany, the defence ministry announced here.

A spokesman said British military and West German police are investigating the incident. Soldier's families were evacuated from the area but were allowed to return after the bomb was defused.

The bomb, planted in a rental car, contained 110 pounds of explosives in two packs in the car's trunk, the spokesman said.

The discovery followed a string of bombings at British army bases in West Germany last weekend. Eight bombs exploded outside installations, causing some damage but only one casualty, a young woman soldier slightly hurt by glass.

One bomb containing 60 pounds of explosives was recovered virtually intact after it failed to detonate properly.

Informed military sources here said British army bomb disposal experts, including two from Northern Ireland, have examined the latest device and the remnants of the others, and believe they were made by the Irish outlawed Republican Army (IRA).

The IRA's Provisional wing, fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland, has not claimed responsibility for the weekend bombings. It did acknowledge attacking British army bases in West Germany several years ago.

Scotland Yard said Michael Holden, a former national organizer for Sinn Fein, the IRA's political front, was arrested at London's Heathrow airport Sunday when he flew in from a European city.

Holden was picked up at the airport by the Yard's Special Branch agents and held under the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

CARDINALS UNDER LOCK AND KEY

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Swiss colonel, a French prelate and an Italian marquis will lock the cardinals in today to make sure no outsider gets in while a new pope is being elected.

The job once belonged to the Conclave Marshal, traditionally a prince from the Chigi family, one of the most ancient in Rome, but Pope Paul VI did away with that title.

Under the 1975 conclave rules, Col. Franz Pfyffer von Altishofen, commandant of the Swiss Guard, shares the honor with Bishop Jacques Martin, the outgoing head of the pontifical household, and Marquis Giulio Sacchetti, the outgoing governor of Vatican City.

They enter the conclave briefly along with the electors and, placing a hand on the gospel, swear to "diligently and scrupulously" guard the conclave.

Then they leave, and while the Cardinal Chamberlain locks the doors from within, they guard the sealed doors and lock up the two that had remained open.

Then, the keys are given to Sacchetti. It is his job to be on call day and night as long as the conclave lasts to open one of the doors in case of emergency, such as taking a cardinal or one of the 70 other persons inside to a hospital. He can be summoned by the single telephone operating inside the conclave.

Pfyffer von Altishofen, from Lucernr, and his 80 Swiss Guards are in charge of keeping outsiders out.

"Everything is locked up and it is our duty to prevent anyone from breaking in," he told Vatican Radio.

Martins, from Amiens, told the interviewer: "We are in charge of making sure that all doors remain properly sealed and locked and keep an eye on the two revolving drums through which those in the conclave get food and correspondence."

The marquis was tightlipped. The interviewer asked him whether he would be carrying the keys all the time, how many keys there are and their size.

Sacchetti, a Roman, replied: "This is an interesting question for public curiosity but let me drop this subject since this is part of dutiful caution."

PLO Claims Iraq Arranged Poisoning of Wadi Haddad

BEIRUT (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) charged Thursday that Iraq arranged the murder of Dr. Wadi Haddad and that the reputed godfather of international terrorism did not die of cancer as earlier reported.

The official PLO newspaper, Falastin Al Thawra, said a slow-working poison was administered to Haddad, a pediatrician-turned-guerrilla, at a dinner in Baghdad given by Sadoun Shaker, chief of the Iraqi secret service.

Haddad died in East Germany on March 29, which the newspaper said was shortly after he was poisoned. It was reported at the time that Haddad, 49, died of leukemia.

The newspaper said an autopsy by East German physicians established that Haddad, mastermind of some of the world's most spectacular terrorist operations, died "from a kind of poison that causes a slow death."

Dr. George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, of which Haddad was a co-founder, dismissed the newspaper allegation as nonsense.

The PLO and Iraq have been locked in a propaganda and terror war recently that has involved assassinations and grenade attacks in London, Paris, Beirut, Kuwait, Tripoli and Islamabad, Pakistan.

The latest PLO allegation followed official announcements that Algeria was mediating a truce in the Iraqi-PLO war.

The PLO newspaper said Haddad's relations with the Iraqi regime became strained because the Iraqi secret service "tried to control Haddad's network and force him to get Iraqi clearance for every operation he planned in advance."

Haddad introduced aircraft hijacking in the Middle East in 1968. In 1970, his operatives commandeered four Western jetliners in a 24-hour period.

One U.S. jumbo jetliner was blown up at Cairo airport the next day. The three other planes were destroyed in Jordan a few days later.

His last reputed terrorist operation was the hijacking of a Lufthansa jetliner to Mogadishu, Somalia, in October, 1977, in an abortive attempt to free West German terrorists jailed in West Germany.

In another development involving the Arab feud, the president of the American-Arab Relations Committee said in Damascas that Syria has "accepted in principle" a proposed Iraqi-Palestinian meeting to heal the rift.

Mohammed Mehdi said PLO chairman Yasser Arafat also has accepted the proposal "without any inhibition." Mehdi said he will go to Baghdad to see how Iraqi President Ahmed Hassan el Bakr views the proposal.

Syria Warned in Press Israel to Aid Lebanese

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli newspapers Thursday published a vague warning to Syria that Israel would "do all it can" to strengthen Lebanese Christians against a feared major assault against them by Syrian forces already in Lebanon.

The warning followed an urgent late-night meeting Tuesday called unexpectedly by Prime Minister Menachem Begin. The Israeli media said the meeting dealt with Lebanon.

Syrian troops make up the bulk of a 30,000-man Arab League peacekeeping force sent to Lebanon to quell that country's 1975-76 civil war. In recent weeks the Syrians have bombarded Christian sectors of Beirut and engaged in battles with Christian militiamen.

Israeli government spokesmen would not comment on a report in the Chicago Tribune that Lebanese Christian leader Camille Chamoun attended the meeting with Begin and other Israeli leaders.

Reporters outside the meeting saw a car speeding from Begin's home as the conference broke up and later heard a helicopter take off from a nearby government heliport.

The newspaper Yediot Aharonot said Israel expects the Syrians to launch a new drive in the near future to crush Christian forces.

Vorster Seeks Namibia Truce

PRETORIA (Reuter) — South African Prime Minister John Vorster on Thursday urged the United Nations as well as Canada and four other Western powers who have proposed a peace plan for Namibia to press black guerrillas there to accept a ceasefire.

Vorster spoke after a clash on the frontier region between Zambia and the Caprivi strip, a region in Namibia, which is also known as South-West Africa.

South Africa blamed the guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) for the frontier battle.

Vorster said that although there are indications that Zambia is not officially involved in the clash, responsibility rests with countries which made their territory available to guerrillas.

He said SWAPO should not be allowed to continue fighting while waging a political campaign with other parties to bring Namibia to independence under the Western plan.

The prime minister said: "The SWAPO attack from Zambia once again emphasized the urgent necessity that the secretary-general of the UN, the Security Council and particularly the five Western powers should now finally insist upon SWAPO making a swift choice between a peaceful solution and violence."

The other four Western countries are Britain, the United States, France and West Germany.

Vorster added: "A responsibility also rests upon those countries which make their territory available to SWAPO for its operations.

Jets Strafe Wrong Village

TUEBINGEN (AP) — Four West German Phantom jet fighters mistakenly strafed the village of Seeburg near this southwestern university city Thursday, police reported. The pilots fired exercise ammunition and no one was injured. Most damage recorded was to roofs of houses.

The crews of the jets apparently mistook Seeburg and its neighboring village Urach for "ghost village Gruorn," a target on a NATO manoeuvre site close by.

CAR PROVES TOO MUGGY

DETROIT (AP) — Steve Wright of suburban Birmingham thought he had taken all precautions against getting mugged. But he overlooked one little thing.

So a mugger thrust himself in through the open sunroof and relieved Wright, 20, and Barbara Szutkowski, 21, of Detroit, of his wallet, his watch, his tape casette player and a total of $16 from the two of them, police reported.

Icelandic Crisis Unsolved

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — Ludvik Josefsson, Icelandic Communist Party leader, today gave up his attempt to form a new government.

He told President Kristjan Eldjarn of his decision, but said afterward he was still optimistic a new leftist government would be formed in a few days.

Eldjarn has not said whom he will ask next to solve the two-month-old government crisis. Iceland has had a caretaker government since general elections on June 25 in which leftist parties made big gains.

Josefsson would have been Iceland's first Communist premier. He said the Social Democrats had pulled out of a proposed coalition because they did not want him to lead the government.

Desai Offer Spurned

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Morarji Desai said Thursday he would place any corruption charges against his son before India's chief justice if those charges are submitted in writing by a member of Parliament.

The 82-year-old prime minister's offer did not satisfy opposition parties, whose membership outnumbers the governing Janata party in the upper house. The opposition insisted the presiding officer, Vice President B. D. Jatti, carry out a two-week old resolution calling for an official investigation into alleged corruption among relatives of Janata party leaders.

Jatti said he would announce his action on the resolution Monday.

Desai's critics have charged that his son Kantilal has exploited his father's position for profit. Kantilal, 52, gave up a successful business career more than a decade ago to become personal assistant to his father.

The charges against Kantilal Desai surfaced anew in June when the prime minister fired his home affairs and health ministers for breaking cabinet discipline.

Charan Singh, the ousted home minister, said the real reason he was dismissed might have been Desai's irritation over his suggestion that corruption charges against Kantilal be investigated. Singh admitted there was no proof of the allegations. But he said an investigation would strengthen the government's prestige and clear the air.

TEEN-AGER JOGS MEMORY

QUEBEC (CP) — Seventeen-year-old Luc Lapointe of suburban Ste. Foy claimed a place in the Guinness Book of World Records Thursday after reciting by memory the first 8,750 figures following the decimal point in the mathematical ratio pi.

Lapointe, who said he devoted his last four months to intensive memory work and jogging, beat the previous record of 5,050 figures set March 22, 1977, by Michael Poultney of Britain and a later record of 7,900 set in the United States but not yet endorsed. Few people get past 3.14159.

Pi, a letter of the Greek alphabet, represents the ratio between the circumference and diameter of a circle. It is used in calculations involving circles and spheres.

Lapointe, a management student at a junior college, started at 2:30 p.m. PDT before three sworn witnesses and reached 5,051 figures after 55 minutes, eclipsing the recognized record. At 4:17 p.m., he reached the mark of 7,900 but he almost gave up when a memory lapse paralysed him for about 30 minutes.

After concentrating hard, he began his recital again, reaching his 8,750th figure at 5:15 p.m., but stopped because of exhaustion, falling short of his goal of 11,111.

Pleased with his performance, Lapointe plans to pursue his studies, and hopes for a career in computers, statistics or meteorology.

Sugar Union Warned

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has warned a union against repeating job action at the B.C. Sugar Refinery following a hearing during which a union representative and a union lawyer walked out.

A board panel under vice-chairman Ben van der Woerd found the work stoppage violated the provincial labor code, but it rejected a company application for a cease and desist order and did not act on a further request for the right to seek damages.

The board said it will deal expeditiously with further company applications if another work stoppage occurs.

Chaplain Accuses Police of Torture

MONTREAL (CP) — Msgr. Raymond Lavoie, the chaplain of Orsainville prison who has caused a storm of controversy by accusing Quebec's police of brutality, said Thursday there may be as many as 100 police in the province who specialize in torture.

The chaplain called on all people who have experienced police brutality to send him details and the names of police officers involved. He said the 2,000 responses he expects to receive will reveal the existence of the large torture force.

Lavoie, who first made his accusations of police brutality at a funeral service last week for an 18-year-old prisoner found hanging in his jail cell, said his offensive against brutality was a Christian gesture.

Laurent Caplette, president of a union representing Quebec prison guards, who Wednesday called for Lavoie's dismissal as chaplain for making "false" and "provocative" accusations against police, told the chaplain prison guards do not want to see him inside Orsainville prison walls again.

But Lavoie maintained that he will return to his post within a few days.

Caplette, who has denied Lavoie's charge that there were cases of torture at Orsainville as recently as three years ago, said that the chaplain's statements provoked a protest by prisoners.

Tribute To Leaders

Flags on government buildings will be at half mast on two occasions next week in memory of the deaths of two African leaders — one white and one black.

The provincial secretary's ministry said Saturday's lowered flags will be to commemorate Nicholaas Diedrichs, president of South Africa who died Monday.

Thursday, flags will again be lowered to mark the death Tuesday of Kenya's longtime black ruler Jomo Kenyatta.

Students Demand Pay

TORONTO (CP) — A number of high school students said Thursday they want governments to pay them for going to school.

"School is child labor."

Mullen, a member of the Regent Park Teen Association, said the federal baby bonus covers half of his school expenses, which he estimated at about $545 a year.

"So where does that leave us—with no money, no pleasure and near starvation," Mullen said at a meeting sponsored by the association and other groups interested in payment for school work.

Brenda Ellis, 15, of Peterborough, Ont., said that "the government doesn't give enough money for food, transportation."

"It's the government's fault we're poor, not our parents."

She said after the meeting that "my mom has been bugging me to get a summer job to help pay for school, but it's impossible to find one."

Ruth Hall of Wages for Housework in England said students 16 to 18 years old in Britain will receive about $20 a week next year from the government for going to school.

Country-Western Music Featured In 4-Hour Show

Local bands and national stars will be featured on Channel 9 Saturday, August 26 when KCTS celebrates Country-Western Night. The evening's entertainment lasts from 8:15 p.m. to 12:45 a.m.

The local groups, which were recorded during a live performance at Puyallup's Paul Bunyan Restaurant, include Boothill, Cayuse and Rainbow Trail. All three bands have been acclaimed for their talented vocalists and strong harmonies. Boothill, which plays commercial country music, is best known for its band leader - singer - guitarist Chris Carpenter — a popular KAYO radio personality. Cayuse is a Seattle-based band which travels extensively: this country rock group is noted for its fiddle player. Rainbow Trail, which also hails from Seattle, is made up of Brian Bogh, Chris Bogh, Brian Hutchinson and Rod Cook.

The evening is rounded out with programs from the Austin City Limits series. At 8:45 p.m., The Texas Playboys and Ernest Tubbs and The Texas Troubadours are featured. The Playboys carry on the tradition of Texas swing started by Bob Wills, while the Troubadours provide "good old-fashioned, foot-stomping music." Tubbs is best known as the originator of the honky tonk sound.

Merle Haggard, who has been writing and performing for 15 years, appears with his award-winning band, The Strangers, at 10:15 p.m. Numbers they perform include: Workingman Can't Get Nowhere Today, Lonesome Fugitive and Old Fashioned Love.

Final performance of the evening, at 11:45 p.m., is by two members of the Country Music Hall of Fame — Chet Atkins and Merle Travis. Atkins, one of a handful of musicians who created the Nashville Sound, is considered a virtuoso in classical, jazz, flamenco, pop and country guitar. Travis, also know for his guitar virtuosity, is the composer of such popular hits as Sixteen Tons and Dark as a Dungeon.

Taste, Family Fare Return in Slow Stages

TV Drops Outright Violence

By ARTHUR UNGER

NEW YORK — Commercial TV in the United States is veering back to nonviolence, taste, and family fare — but in slow stages.

Only some of this trend will be visible among the 21 new network programs premiering this fall, beginning Sept. 11.

Some questionably titillating shows like "Soap," "Charlie's Angels," and "Three's Company" will still be there — they are still too financially successful to be killed by a money-oriented industry. But chances are they will be modified and mellowed slightly in a process which some TV executives call "stroking" the pressure groups. And there will be more of the same kind of programming, but milder than originally planned.

Most of the outright violence will be gone, with only calmed-down "Starsky and Hutch" representing the disappearing breed of violence-prone cop shows.

There will be no immediate shift toward literary or quality series — with a few exceptions there is a greater emphasis on fluff, laughter, and light entertainment. But at least there is definite evidence that all three networks are incorporating substance and quality and family values into their current and future thinking.

Almost symbolic is one of the first changes which NBC's new president, Fred Silverman, made when he arrived: the title and direction of one of the network's already scheduled new shows, "Legs." Originally concerned with Las Vegas showgirls who had children to care for, it became "Who's Watching the Kids," with the emphasis switched from the girls to the children.

Several major forces within and without the TV industry are converging on programming decisionmakers to affect the industry's previous anything-goes-as-long-as-it-gets-ratings attitude — the Parent-Teacher Association and other organized pressure groups, consumer boycotts, advertiser resistance, the outgoing rewrite of the Communications Act, the upcoming Carnegie Commission report on public television, the changing attitude of top-level network executives, and a general feeling among TV viewers and programmers alike that it is time for new directions.

In most instances, those directions can only be up. More than ever before the face of American television as it enters its premier season reflects a split personality. All of those conflicting movements are colliding and combining, pushing and pulling. The result is most likely to be totally ambivalent.

Aside from CBC's high-quality, literate new series, "The Paper Chase," starring Joh Houseman, the upgrading is most apparent in the level of the mini-series. This particularly is true at NBC, where such properties as "Brave New World," "From Here to Eternity," "Little Women," and "Centennial" were chosen as the raw material for multi-houred specials, rather than the pop novels of previous years.

With a good part of the TV audience still tuning in to ABC's basically teen-oriented series, that network is standing pat for the most

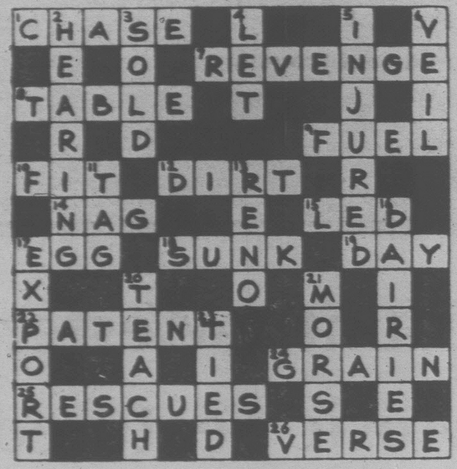
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

1. CHASE not chasm. The chasm could hardly "lead," in an active sense, to anybody plunging over it.
7. REVENGE not revenue. REVENGE is the stronger answer, since revenue is merely normal income.
9. FUEL not full. "FUEL tank" gives a convincingly understandable case, but "full tank" is comparatively vague and pointless: the fact that it was a full tank has nothing to do with the need to keep it from running dry.
10. FIT not hit. "FIT for nothing," yes; but a person who is simply hit (possibly with some cause) may receive some measure of smypathy.
15. LED not fed. LED is more firmly apt, since "fed" doesn't necessarily mean hand fed; dangerous animals must still be fed.
18. SUNK not junk. On the face of it, the clue may naturally be taken to refer to a "ship" as you or I would normally understand it, which may be SUNK but is not a Chinese junk. One may also feel that while "a ship" — any particular ship — "may be" SUNK, it simply is, or is not, a junk.
19. DAY not dad. "DAY" (i.e., DAY's activity) relates more directly to the question of behavior. "Dad" is unsuitably specific; if anything, it's a question of family environment, etc.
22. PATENT not parent. PATENT is more firmly apt, since a parent may (if aged, etc.) be protected by the offspring.
24. GRAIN not train. One associates the effect of "weather" with something broader, or more country-wide, than a train.
25. RESCUES not rescuer. "RESCUES" is more strongly to the point, since personal information about the rescuer himself is apt to be fairly commonplace.

CLUES DOWN:

2. HEARING not healing or heating. "Hearing aids" is an apt phrase, but one has heating appliances rather than "aids"; similarly, requisites for medical treatment are not aptly termed "healing aids."
4. LET not get. To "not be pleased with" people, means that they do something to offend or disappoint you (LET you down), rather than that you dislike them absolutely, in the sense that they "get you down."
5. INJURED not insured. It's more the case that he might consider getting his hands insured — or, indeed, insure them — rather than that the "thought could occur" to him that it might happen, as if accidentally.
5. VEIL not veal. Since a certain number of men do shop for meat, veal is the less apt answer.
13. RENO not rent. One naturally associates RENO with temporary residence (merely in order to take advantage of the divorce facilities). Many people, however, rent accommodation for years.
16. DAIRIES not dailies. The clue hints at a comparison with the small unmechanized dailies/DAIRIES of former times — which idea links up better with DAIRIES. Also, "dailies" (rather than newspapers in general) is pointlessly specific.
17. EXPORT not expert. A person is regarded as simply expert, rather than suitably qualified to do "expert work," as an understood requirement.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Stars 'True Friends'

By JOHN N. GOUDAS
And STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK —The elevator was crowded as it climbed to the 65th floor Rainbow Room, atop the RCA building in Rockefeller Center, where soap fans were attending the first Soap Opera Festival ever held in New York City. Excitement was hanging in the air.

The Rainbow Room was packed but the gathered were not only women; there were also many men. They had all come to meet some of the stars from Another World, the popular daytime serial, who would be gracing the dais shortly.

Joyce Becker, who organizes the soap opera festivals along with her husband Allan Sugarman, announced to the throng that this was the 24th such event but the very first one in the Big Apple. The first star to come down the stairs was Beverly Penberthy, who plays Pat Randolph, and she was greeted with screams of delight. Following in rapid succession were: Jay Moran (he's Vince Framme), who evoked audible sighs; Dorothy Lyman (she's Gwen Parish Framme), who was almost knocked over by the bear hug of an over-eager lady who rushed up from the audience and threw her arms around the unsuspecting Dorothy; Lionel Johnston (Mike Randolph), who actually got a few whistles for the less reserved ladies; and Victoria Wyndham (she's Rachel Corey) who got the biggest hand. Ms. Becker then announced a surprise guest, Doug Watson (he's Rachel's husband Mac Corey).

As most fans of the soap know, Rachel and Mac recently had a new baby — a bouncing girl named Amanda — and the crowd couldn't contain itself applauding the new parents of Another World.

The stars were joined on the dais by writer-creator harding Lemay and executive producer Paul Rauch. Mr. LeMay inherited the hot seat as the fans ripped into him for his plot decisions regarding their favorites, while trying to pry some secrets about future plotting. One concerned viewer asked what was in store for the newly borl Amanda, to which Mr. Lemay answered "I never kill babies."

Amid the festive air, a woman got up and sincerely thanked the stars of the soap for filling many of her lonely hours. She said, "I was married when I was 14 and I lost my girlfriends, since they were still in school and I had to start keeping house. Well, the soaps helped me a great deal and I feel as if they are my true friends."

Many of the fans gave the impression that they shared the same sentiments.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Two handsome new faces have popped up in Springfield, the setting of Guiding Light. The first is Burton Cooper, who plays the new resident at Cedars Hospital. You can bet his presence will set many a nurse's and patient's heart a-flutter. Burton was working in California before he decided to come back to new York and try his luck. He had been doing mostly stage work but he also managed parts in such TV series as Emergency, SWAT, and Logan's Run. Guiding Light marks his first featured role in a soap. The other good looking young man is Marcus Smythe who is playing Amanda's estranged husband, Gordon Middleton. Marcus has had small parts in Love of Life and Search for Tomorrow . . . John Beradino, the popular Dr. Steve hardy in General Hospital, is being type cast in an upcoming TV movie, Guide for the Married Woman, which stars Cybill Shepherd. That's right, John is playing a medic . . . Don Stewart, Mike Dauer in Guiding Light, recently filled in for Vice President Walter Mondale at a national Conference of Lieutenant Governors' banquet, held in New Orleans, La.

PLOT PORTENTS. Will Derek be able to leave Kay Chancellor after she saved his life on The Young and the Restless? The bullet meant for Derek remains in Kay's spine, but Chancellor fans know Kay will recover. Playgirl Nikki needs all the help she can get from her sister Casey right now, even though her venereal disease has been cured.

David's luck has changed on Days of Our Lives. Having son Timmy back turns the young dad into a different man. Chances are Trish will return now that Timmy is with his father. Moving in with May should tighten the bond between Chris and Mary, but stubborn Chris is unable to shed his quite feelings. Young Donna continues to be a thorn in Marlena's side.

On the morning of Tom and Erica's wedding in All My Children the dispensation from the church has not arrived. It's a real cliff-hanger. Nancy Grant has her baby and its a boy!

Ex-con Brad is having trouble adjusting to life on the outside on One Life to Live. Marco leaves karen alone for awhile and turns his nefarious sights on Vicki. Flash — Ed goes into cardiac arrest!

The big news on Ryan's Hope is Faith's miscarriage. However, in her delirium during the ordeal, Faith deals Tom a severe blow when she keeps calling out a man's name — and it ain't Tom.

Paula and Michael finally agree to go their separate ways in High Hopes, but we all know that it will be impossible. Meanwhile Norma shocks Jessie with one of her suggestions.

John Hearn's Collectibles

What to save in order to bring joy and profit to your unborn great grandchildren is the most intriguing question in the whole world of collectibles. Two factors are critical — space and inflation. A couple of years ago when Cadiallac were making the last of the convertibles they advertized them as 'collector's items.' Those who bought one and put it away to offer it 'mint' fifty years from now will presumably make a great deal of money — but whether they will make an actual profit depends entirely on the relative value of money.

Most of us cannot buy Cadillacs to use, let alone to stash away. What WE are looking for are the classic collectibles which cost virtually nothing and which everyone else is throwing away. Only later, when they have almost all gone, do they become collector's items and we or our descendents, make the killing.

The thoughtful collector does not start now, in 1978. He reaches back into the still accessible past for items less than fifty years old which are still more or less neglected. Last week I mentioned old sports magazines; a much safer bet is old automotive literature. The specification is perfect — issued in immense quantities and thrown away in almost equally immense quantities.

Some imagination is necessary. We know that sales literature and shop manuals for such classics as the Cord or the Pierce-Arrow are already commanding fancy prices (Pierce-Arrow 1922 catalogue — $200) — and that is understandable because of the nostalgia surrounding antique automobiles — but the dealer showroom book describing the entire 1955 Chevrolet line will trade for $250. Nostalgia is creeping up on us.

The odds against finding a Stanley Steamer repair manual at a garage sale are astronomical but the literature of the 'fifties' and early 'sixties' is still turning up with gratifying frequency at negligible prices. Snap these up and you have a twenty year start on the future. Watch for old garages changing ownership; there could be treasure chests of grungy old automotive literature which the new owner will bless you for carting away. Try to suppress the grin on your face!

Condition is not of ultimate importance. Predictably the highest priced collectibles will be mint but this leaves a growing market among those who are rebuilding old cars — not Hupmobiles but Edsels. How do you rebuild an Edsel without a shop manual. It is something you MUST have — a list of every part of the automobile with code numbers and illustrated instructions as to what is fixed onto which. Such manuals, if they survive at all in an automotive repair shop will have been through many very oily hands, but provided they are still legible, they will solve the rebuilder's problems.

Rarity is bound to be a factor — but not absolutely so. The man who buys a Maserati is more likely to look after the manual than those who are faithful to the General Motors product.

Finally the classification includes ALL automotive literature — sales fold-outs, leaflets showing optional equipment, books of upholstery samples and booklets showing how to look after the beast.

Make a point of never paying very much. Resist those who want their profits now. Protect from damp, mark 'do not destroy' and leave where your great grandchild will find it. After all, by that time there will be no gasoline engines at all.

Top Models Flying High

By JOAN GEOGHEGAN

In April of 1977, an internatinal production crew under the direction of Mike Gargiulo set up shop in Leningrad, U.S.S.R., to tape The Leningrad Ice Show. On Tuesday, Aug. 29, CBS will air this figure-skating special.

Although producer Gargiulo spent only two weeks in Leningrad, his special has taken a full year to reach American audiences. It took six months to get the tapes and four months for other ice shows to air. "It's the first time I had to wait in line after Snoopy," Gargiulo jokes referring to the Snoopy's Holiday on Ice special.

Although he had problems getting the special on the air, Gargiulo had few hang-ups with the actual production. Mostly, because he's had plenty of experience with U.S.-U.S.S.R. productions.

Two years ago he followed "The Russian Dance Festival" tour of the U.S. The Soviets asked him, in particular, to tape the tour for television.

Then there is the trip Gargiulo took to Moscow in 1958 as part of a cultural exchange program to build a television studio for the Soviets. "I was staff director at NBC. I was sent to show the Russians what was then the new color TV.

CHANGING CULTURE FEATURED ON VISA

The color, flavor and pulse of a society in flux are recorded by video artist Bill Viola in "Memories of the Ancestors: The Solomon Islands," the next program in Channel 9's VISA series airing Wednesday, August 30, at 11:30 p.m.

"During the past two decades," Viola explains, "2,000 years of Solomon Islands' cultural heritage has been all but obliterated by the constant bombardment of Western ideas and influences. I tried to create an audi-visual statment about my experiences and impressions of the Islands — the program is a form of visual anthropology."

During one of his initial visits to the Solomon Islands, Viola met Moro, a village cult and spiritual leader. According to villagers, Moro died 25 years ago and after being dead for over 24 hours, awoke as he was being prepared for burial. Moro told his startled attendants he experienced a poweerful vision to create a House of Memories — a bridge for young people between the ancestral heritage and their contemporary life situation.

Noro enlisted the aid of the village young to erect his vision and the House of Memories now stands full of artifacts and the appointed site of ritualistic ceremony. Through the experiences of Moro, Viola was able to draw out much of the untarnished culture and record its singular elements.

Four Short Plays by Young Wilder

Like many a successful author, Thornton Wilder began writing when he was quite young, filling notebook after notebook with cryptic short stories and fanciful plays. Now, four of those early works have been produced for television for the first time on Wilder Wilder airing Wednesday, August 30, at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

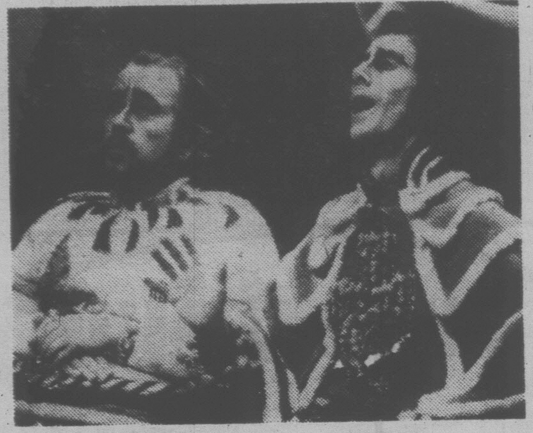
Wilder Wilder is designed to illuminate the art, life and mind of the young Wisconsin-born author who later wrote such classics as "Our Town" and "the Skin of Our Teeth."

The plays were taken from a collection of Wilder's early writings entitled The Angel That Troubled the Waters. Until now, these unique dramas were considered unproducible parlor pieces and have never been performed on the stage. Wilder himself saw these early attempts as suitable only for recitation.

Thus, the translation from parlor piece to television drama called for video experimentation and ingenious set and property designs. Costumes, sets, and special effects had to be creatively combined to capture the hallucinatory and dreamlike quality of Wilder's lifelong fascination with moral and religious themes.

In addition, each play demanded the creation of a separate and complex environment.

The dramas are laced with humor and each represents a young writer's innocent probing of words and images.



Dennis Kennedy and Richard Cox between takes on set for Wilder's play And the Sea Shall Give Up Its Dead.

Looking at Stars

What some of them point to as "The luck of Dennis Weaver," is what actors gamble for when they leave hit series "for something better."

Dennis, for those who don't remember "Gunsmoke" in its early years, could have had himself a nifty annuity from his featured role as the limping Chester. But Dennis wanted even niftier earnings. His first starring series, "Kentucky Jones," bombed . . . but "Gentle Ben" and "MacLeod" were major league pickin's.

Pernell Roberts, however, though he works often, never latched onto a second brass ring as shiny as what he tossed away when he exited "Bonanza" too soon. It made millionaires of Lorne Greene, Michael Landon and the late Dan Blocker.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Could you please tell me how Dan Blocker of "Bonanza" died? We are having a disagreement about this. — F.H., Washington, Penn.

A. Blocker died of a heart attack.

Q. Could you tell me why Carol Burnett isn't on anymore? Will she ever be back on television again? — K.C., Southington, Ohio.

A. After years of doing the weekly variety show, "The Carol Burnett Show," she decided to call it quits as far as the series is concerned. She does not plan to retire from show business, however. And undoubtedly, she'll propably be in another series, but it's a matter of finding the right type of series.

Q. In the series "MASH," what finally happened to Major Frank Burns? — J.D., Piedmont, Calif.

A. Larry Linville left the series this year to pursue other acting assignments. As for how they handled it on the show, Major Burns became stranded in Japan while on a leave and was subsequently reassigned there.

Q. Can you explain why "Black Sheep Squadron" was removed from NBC's lineup, and will it return? — T.J., Chester, Va.

A. The show was cancelled because of poor ratings and will not return next season. However, a number of episodes not screened prior to the cancellation will be aired throughout the summer months.

Q. Please settle an argument I'm having with a friend. We recently saw the 1972 movie, "Sandcastles," but we disagree over who played the boy. Was it Jan-Michael Vincent or Ryan O'Neal? — B.C., Morgan, N.J.

A. Jan-Michael Vincent starred in the movie.

Q. Did Adrienne Barbeau always play the daughter on "Maude"? I vaguely remember that someone else played the part in the early days of the series. — P.D., Fayetteville, Tenn.

A. In the series' pilot, Marsha Rodd played the daughter. When the program was given the go-ahead as a weekly series, Rodd said she didn't want to be tied down to a series and so turned down the role. It then went to Barbeau.

Q. I understand "Little House on the Prairie" will undergo major changes during the coming season. Is this true? — E.B., Eugene, Mo.

A. As you may recall, the fourth season of "Little House on the Prairie" ended with the highly rated two-part drama in which the Ingalls family suffered with their eldest daughter, Mary, as she went blind, and was forced to seek a new life in a distant city.

During the season's forthcoming fifth season, the plot line will follow the Ingalls as economic conditions force them away from the simple farm life in Walnut Grove into the noisy city where Mary is a teacher at a school for the blind. Although happy to be back with Mary, the family is jarred by life in the wild little city of Wonoka.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

BOOKS

For Some, Writing is Like Breathing

By ROBERT FULFORD

Anthony Burgess, in his bluff and confident way, makes writing sound as simple as mowing the lawn. Burgess has produced, in a pretty brief career — he didn't start till middle age — an enormous shelf of novels, biographies, essays, plays, whatever. I once asked him how he managed to write so much.

"It's easy," he said. "Much easier than you think. People make a great fuss about it but, look, anyone can write 1,000 words a day. You just have to do that every day, and in a year you have 365,000 words. That's several novels, a play, some essays, perhaps a biography. It's that simple."

Burgess isn't unique. Many writers approach their work in much that way.

At one end of the literary spectrum is the sweat-over-every-paragraph-for-days school, the heirs of Flaubert. (He worked all morning and only put in a comma. In the afternoon he took it out.) Stephen Vizinczey, the author of In Praise of Older Women, is of the Flaubert persuasion. He's been working on his second novel since about 1966.

At the other end is Georges Simenon, author of more than 200 novels — he has never made a precise count — who until his recent retirement was one of the natural wonders of the literary world.

Other writers go to their work as condemned murderers go to the gallows; prolific writers rush to their desks, full of joy and anticipation.

Consider Janet Dailey, a 34-year-old American who writes Harlequin novels. She had trouble with her first book: It took her a year and a half. But once it was accepted she rushed ahead. In the last three years she's finished 33 novels, and Harlequin is bringing them out at the rate of one a month.

WOODCOCK . . . tops in Canada

ASIMOV . . . can't say no

She gets up every day at 4 a.m. and works until she has produced exactly 11 manuscript pages. A Harlequin novel runs 176 manuscript pages, so at this rate she knows she can finish a book in 16 days. Each day after she finishes 11 pages she stops — "even if I'm in the middle of a sentence, or the middle of a word, I stop right at the bottom of the 11th page, and pick up from exactly that point."

The late Richard Gehman, an American magazine writer, was nicknamed The Factory because he produced so many articles so quickly. In the 1960s he was paid about $1,000 an article. He required about $100,000 a year (having a couple of divorces and numerous children in the background), so he produced two magazine articles a week, for everybody from Playboy to National Geographic. Other writers, who labored for weeks on one article, considered Gehman astonishing. He was likely to write a piece between lunch and dinner, and often the piece was quite good.

The most prolific of all serious writers in Canada is George Woodcock, who has written some 50 books and thousands of articles. Woodcock is the opposite of a hack, but in one way he resembles the most prolific hacks: He is apparently more comfortable at the typewriter than anywhere else.

Isaac Asimov, described in the July issue of Bookviews as "America's most published author," explains his peculiar ability as the result of his heritage:

"I write so many books because I am a hard-working, industrious fellow, driven by the memory of generations of people who — all bright, according to my father — wanted to accomplish things in the world. My father is up there looking down; I don't dare stop."

Asimov has written more than 180 books, as well as thousands of articles and stories. One of his problems is that he can't turn down assignments: "If someone calls me and wants an article done by tomorrow, or a book next month, I say: 'Sure, I'll do it.' "During a recent period of 78 months he published 75 books. Most writers have difficulty satisfying the demands of one publisher; Asimov's problem is to find enough publishers to bring out the books he produces.

Most people, including most professional writers, are intimidated by blank paper. Whether it's a sonnet or a letter home, a composition presents problems, and the problems are hard to solve — words must be chosen with care, thoughts that at first seem admirable are later discarded as banal, sentences must be endlessly re-assembled. But the personalities of this small, peculiar corps of writers are so exceptionally well integrated that, for them, writing is very close to breathing. Whether they produce masterworks, as Simenon did, or forgettable schlock, they are very special citizens of the republic of letters, a permanent source of astonishment to all who observe them.

How Man's 'Solutions' Have Become the Problem

By JULIAN REID

Civilized man, as Aristotle astutely observed, is most emphatically a political animal. Just as our prehistoric ancestors were natives of the untamed jungle or the wild savannahs, so we today are natives of the citified nation-state — an environment which, with some help from our increasingly elaborate social institutions and our increasingly sophisticated technology, we have made over wholesale for our own collective convenience.

The last 10,000 years of history comprise the epic saga of this unprecedentedly rapid transition — how an ambitious naked ape succeeded in progressively freeing himself from the thralls of natural ecology, only to find that the man-made sociology which supplanted it can be every bit as harsh and inconsiderate a taskmaster. Until finally, argues philosopher James Ogilvy, we have largely lost control over those very instruments that our ancient forebears forged in the hope of winning mastery over their collective destiny.

"A gradual but fundamental shift," Ogilvy asserts, "has brought us to a point where the traditional solutions have now become the problem: politics and technology have replaced nature in the role of alien environment. The new problem: How to carve out livable spaces within the political-technological wasteland?" And it is this problem that he addresses in Many Dimensional Man.

This dense, challenging, and sometimes dauntingly difficult book may well turn out to be one of the seminal works of our age. Recognizing that we are in urgent need of fresh new modes of thought to replace the outmoded "conventional wisdom" that still rules the roost in the crumbling citadels of the Establishment power-structure, Ogilvy has obliged by proclaiming a radically new paradigm for thinking about Man and the human world he inhabits — "Relational Thought."

Of course, no such far-reaching program can be completely original and unprecedented; and in fact Relational Thought is an ingenious synthesis of prior insights, drawing freely on the pioneering spade-work of a multitude of predecessors. These range all the way from Karl Marx to Lao Tzu, from John Kenneth Galbraith to C. Wright Mills, from R. D. Laing to Gregory Bateson. But the three most significant are Nietzsche, Hegel, and James Hillman, the brilliant Jungian psychologist who formulated the theory of personality-structure which Ogilvy characterizes as "psychological polytheism."

Rejecting orthodox preconceptions in favor of Hillman's pluralistic psychology, Ogilvy argues that the truly sane individual is the one who recognizes his psyche as a veritable society in miniature, a multiplex congeries of distinct selves each with its own distinctive personality, corresponding to the archetypal "gods and goddesses" of Classical mythology. "Man has no individuality," as the great Russian mystic G. I. Gurdjieff asserted bluntly. "He has no single, big I. Man is divided into a multiplicity of small I's." And no more than a Stalin or a Pierre Elliot Trudeau does any one of those multifold "I's" have the right to set itself up as a Big Brotherly ultimate authority, looming on high and laying down the law that all the others must willy-nilly follow.

Such centralized tyranny within mirrors the tyrannical centralization without, each feeding into and also upon the other. Such was the essence of Marcuse's stinging indictment of the prevalent forms of "one-dimensional" awareness.

The only workable alternative, Ogilvy argues with impressive erudition, is a decentralized, pluralistic society peopled with a "many dimensional" citizenry, each blessed with a decentralized, pluralistic consciousness of his or her own — a society of psychic equals, a democracy of multiple souls, instead of an egocentric dictatorship from within. The average reader can hardly be blamed for finding this a difficult notion to grasp. But then, so are most of Ogilvy's key concepts — at least, when they are viewed from the one-dimensional perspective of an intellect schooled in our orthodoxly one-dimensional ways of looking at the world.

That is why Many Dimensional Man makes for inherently difficult reading, requiring, as the author puts it, "a term by term suspension of common sense" — something that requires a considerable effort for most of us. Yet, demanding as it is, the book is correspondingly rewarding, enough so to be more than worth the trouble.

For today, throughout our democratized Western world, people are increasingly losing control over their controllers, even as those controllers themselves are increasingly losing their own control over the instruments by which control is maintained and exercised. Those instruments, meanwhile, are taking on an increasingly maniacal will of their own. And all around us, in consequence, things are falling apart.

And so the staunch few among us who have the stamina to dare the abstract pages of James Ogilvy's book will emerge finally with good reason to be grateful to its author. For Many Dimensional Man, almost unique among the works of today's determinedly noncommital hordes of facelessly academicized philosophers, has the rare courage to address itself to the fundamental task of traditional philosophy: to help the weary seeker after intellectual enlightenment find his way to a richer life and a better world. Not only that, but it carries us a goodly distance along the road to this goal.

MANY DIMENSIONAL MAN: Decentralizing Self, Society, and the Sacred, by James Ogilvy. Oxford. $17.25.

Escaping with the Adventure Writers

By FRED BARNES

In number, variety and quality, the state of what could loosely be termed the action novel has never been better.

These are worrisome times, and in worrisome times people turn to escapist reading.

Just for starters, consider these five novels read over the past few weeks by this reviewer.

Trocadero is the 16th novel for versatile Leslie Waller. It is also a medieval fortress set in the heart of Paris and now used as a super-security vault protecting a fortune in unknown and unlisted treasures. When it is closed, the lone entrance, a tunnel, is flooded for security.

Netta Irish, an international beauty who has inherited a vast fortune and an art collection beyond price from her billionaire husband, has a rebellious daughter who is in love with a young Arab terrorist. In Paris she has at her beck and call a man named Curtis, who is European security chief for a U.S. bank. And keeping an eye on the Arab Dris, or Raoul, is a fine character in Louch, whose specialty for the French Surete is anti-terrorism.

Now, in the Trocadero, are some fine examples of Netta's collection, and the collected works of the Principessa Carloni, a refined blackmailer whose records contain items of great interest to the Mafia.

CONDON

When Dris and his cohort, with the support of Leila Darcy, who is Netta's daughter, make a successful first step in cracking the Trocadero, Waller has all the ingredients necessary for a fast-paced, suspenseful story.

Also a 16th novel is the ribald Bandicoot, by Richard Condon. Again it is fast-paced action, but Bandicoot leans to satire, and even farce. It's an outrageous change of pace that delights, but one wouldn't want a steady diet of the fare.

Capt. Colin Huntington is a disgraced and retired Royal Navy officer, a compulsive gambler who, happily, is married to one of the richest women in the world. Rattling around the world in such diversified modes of transport as the world's largest yacht, planes, helicopters, a hovercraft, and even a balloon, Huntington is alternately wooed and pursued by the minions of great American and Japanese industrial-military complexes, mercenaries, and crack units of two armies. To say nothing of his wife and two mistresses, the saxophone-playing Yvonne and the lissome Kimiko.

Any further detailing of this plot is impossible, but suffice it to say that Condon has impressive credentials as a novelist, with The Manchurian Candidate as only one of these.

McNamara's The Dancing Floor is in stark contrast, a sensitive novel that paints a realistic picture of what is happening today in the Republic of Ireland and, more specifically, Limerick.

Two brothers, Brendan and Colum, are inexorably drawn into involvement with the IRA Provisionals. Brendan, an activist and gunman, becomes a minor folk hero before falling from grace and virtually leaving the movement. Colum, a bored intellectual who has withdrawn from taking vows as a brother in an order, is involved later, but more deeply, as editor of an illegal propaganda newspaper.

A native of Limerick, McNamara now teaches creative writing and fiction at the University of Colorado.

The Fox from His Lair, by John Harris, is further proof that novels of the Second World War will never slow up, let alone cease. The Fox is a German spy desperately trying to get plans of the Allied invasion out of England on the eve of D-Day. On his trail are U.S. Colonel Linus Iremonger and British Major Cuthbert Pargeter.

There is more fact than fiction in this novel, and despite the fact that the work could use more pace, it's a good yarn. Few writers have more books to their credit than the adventuresome Englishman Harris — this is No. 41.

Black Gambit, by Eric Clark, has a current theme — getting a Russian dissident who has the approbation of the U.S. out of Russia. But this time a special adviser to Henry Kissinger decides to do it as an undercover operation, making sure that front men will get the blame if anything goes wrong. A short but readable novel.

A Satiric Scramble Up the Social Ladder

By ANTHONY JENKINS

There are not many novels that one can recommend unreservedly. Margaret Blount's latest is one of those books, and adds to her reputation among Britain's more important writers. Her last novel, When Did You Last See Your Father, written some seven years ago, won the Guardian Fiction Prize for the best novel of its year.

A Woman Of Property conjures up Galsworthy's Forsyte Saga (A Man Of Property) and his satirical thrust, through Soames' treatment of Irene, the late-Victorian attitude which regarded woman as merely a part of a man's property. Miss Blount's title suggests that, despite the married-woman's-property Act which established a woman's lawful independence from her husband, she is still just as likely to become an appendage, one of the things that go to make up the image of his own social self.

But I don't want to make this novel sound like a sociology text-book. I found it a moving and troubling account of life in a rapidly changing world.

In looking back over her life, Joan Saxby, the novel's central character, can only see herself in terms of the houses she has lived in or known. Those memories become the mental "property" which she carries into her maturity, and which have made her into what she is now.

The narrative opens at the rural cottage of her grandparents and her childhood. The details are deeply evocative of old-fashioned values. Every crumpled object fits securely into the child's idea of herself and of those she cares for. Each piece of furniture, each Victorian picture, holds a place in the fantasies: they are familiar, known and loved.

Her own home seems frigid and characterless by comparison, although she and her mother shore up their united dream of that lost easy world against the restless idealism of her father and the contempt of her moneyed aunts. Joan is dragged farther into cold, impersonal modernism when her father moves the family into a drafty and impractical Bauhaus-style monstrosity and she is sent to a private girls' school to mix, incompatibly, with the daughters of town councillors and of members of the local music society.

In her childhood she also runs across other children outside those middle-class bounds: Beryl, whose parents live in a detached house at the "good end" of Church Road and who are just as acquisitive of social status as her own father is: and Neville, whose parents seem contentedly at home in one of the town's poorest roads.

Mr. Saxby's dreams of climbing higher bring the family to ruin, and Joan becomes the pensioner of her rich aunts. She has learned how easily one's property, her own childhood idyl or her father's architectural monster, can disappear.

She also learns that the only way to succeed with her aunts is to have no opinion of her own. So that even though she sees how her aunts "secure" lives have not brought them happiness, she too (like Irene Forsyte before her) marries for money and security.

Her husband is an unfeeling bully. Her children, with whom she once was able to re-capture the vocabulary of her grandparent's worlds, have grown into nameless, directionless strangers. She lives in a large house with every modern gadget but which has no meaning for her.

Drifting through middle-life, neurotic and alcoholic, she attempts to go back to her past worlds. But her parents have become dowdy shells of their former selves; her aunts are decayng or dead; her grandparents' cottage has long since disappeared; Beryl and Neville have married and are scrambling up the social ladder: "Would you like to see the kitchen? It's a Dairymaid Compacta! . . . No dirt, no mess, no fumes . . . That's the air extractor, that's the waste destructor, you just push a button."

The novel is often funny, despite the central nightmare. And it does more tham plot one woman's disintegration. Like so many of her contemporaries, Miss Blount is concerned with modern rootlessness. How, in our quest for things, we run the risk of losing human values. The story is as much modern Britain's as it is Joan Saxby's.

Rosemary Hawley Jarman is also a novelist of some repute. One of her previous books, We Speak No Treason, a sympathetic account of Richard III's reign, has long been a favorite of mine. Crown In Candlelight is an imaginative re-creation of the life of Katherine of France, the bride of Henry V who later married (presumably) Owen Tudor and whose child, by his very existence, laid the corner-stone for the Tudors' flimsy, though fortunate claims to the English throne.

Miss Jarman is more than your run-of-the-mill historical romancer. So often this sort of book falls down in its dialogue, which is either pseudo-Shakespearean fustian or impossible modern. She evades those traps by using direct speech as sparingly as possible in order to explore the minds of her protagonists. We all share the same feelings under the trappings of different historical periods.

Parts of the novel are superb. I think particularly of the second section, "The Prophecy", which transports us to the mists of Wales and the ruined court of Owain Glyn Dwr. His natural daughter, Hywelis, runs wild with the foxes and is gifted with prophetic powers. The supernatural is presented so matter-of-factly that it becomes compellingly real. That sequence also shapes the structure of the entire novel, for later we see the white magic of the Welsh prophetess struggling against the black arts of the Duchess of Gloucester, Eleanor Cobham (who was in fact accused of witchcraft) for possession of Owen Tudor's destiny.

Miss Jarman's gifts lie in making the bare facts of history come alive again in glowing colors. Her novel opens with a convincing picture of the French Court, where alliances fluctuate in accord with the mad king's fragile grasp on reality. And her dramatization of the battle of Agincourt is a masterpiece of the genre: the catalogue of the French dead, King Henry's understanding of his men, the destruction of the English baggage waggons (all familiar from Shakespeare's play) have a renewed vitality here.

The first half of the novel is so good that it led me to a disappointment that I probably would not have felt from the work of a lesser writer. The difference between a good historical novel and mere romantic claptrap rests finally on the trust established between the reader and the writer. When such a book moves beyond documented fact into imaginative guesswork about what might have happened to cause those facts, the reader must remain convinced of the likelihood of those events.

Miss Jarman becomes so enamored of Owen Tudor that she makes him a participant at every major occasion in the book. Owen is so handsome, so gifted, so omnipresent that he loses credibility other than as a cardboard hero of romance. I lost faith in the probability of Miss Jarman's version of history once King Henry was dead and his widow was swept into her Welsh servant's arms. I didn't believe in the heady scenes of passion in castle corridors or the perfect unions in the caves along the wild, Welsh shore.

The novel is neatly structured, exciting, instructive even, but it is weakened by that indulgent romance at its core. Even so, one cannot help but admire the facility with which Miss Jarman is able, through Hywelis' final prophecies, to proclaim the glories of "the greatest dynasty that Wales ever set to rule over England" when the Tudors had been the villains in her story of Richard III. That goes to show how important, and dangerously flexible, point-of-view is in an historical novel.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

New biography falls short
Of a Byronic 19th century character

The reason biographies are so immensely popular could be because biographers are conservative in the approach to their work. Academics have made this field largely their own and they have developed a formula which even non-academics abide by. The essence of the formula is the command given to a witness by the king during the trial in Alice in Wonderland: "Begin at the beginning and go on till you come to the end: then stop."

Success is assured when, all other things being equal, you have a first-class biographer, a lively subject, and profound research. Failure comes if any one of these essential ingredients is absent. Remove more than one and the result is disastrous.

A new biography of Richard Burton (no, not that Burton) by Michael Hastings falls into the disaster category because the author, a playwright making his initial attempt at biography, has failed to bring it off, and because although a wealth of unpublished material concerning Burton exists Hastings did not succeed in persuading anyone to release any of it.

At this point it may prove helpful to some readers to be reminded that the Richard Burton under study is the famous 19th century character who had a thirst for travel, adventure, knowledge and self-dramatization, as well as a brilliant mind capable of absorbing some 40 languages and dialects.

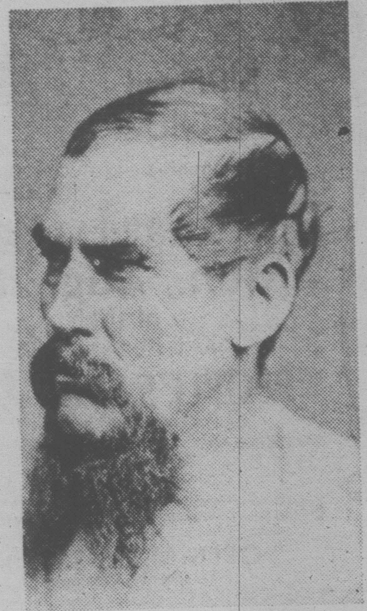
Disguised as an Arab, Burton became the most notorious, if not the first, Englishman to penetrate the forbidden city of Mecca. Later, he and a companion, Jack Speke, attempted to find the source of the Nile, and although both men discovered vast lakes in East Africa, neither was absolutely correct. During the ensuing 10 years of humiliating public quarrels that it took to sort out the confusion, the two friends became bitter enemies.

Meanwhile, Burton wrote two masterpieces of anthropology and exploration, Pilgrimage to El-Medinah and Meccah, and Lake Regions of Central Africa. Then, with dramatic suddenness, and almost with sinister self-contempt, he mysteriously burnt himself out.

The change coincided with his marriage, at 40, to Isobel Arundell, a devout Catholic who was a bland and seemingly demure woman of good birth, but who is said to have cloaked Burton in what one obvious misogynist described as "a jealous and guarded sickliness."

Overnight, the controversial, publicity-seeking explorer with Bryonic gifts, who for years had exhausted himself with studies of the curious and exotic, was transformed into a shrunken individual who made a slim living restlessly moving across the globe from one minor consulship to another. Knighted in old age, as a signal that his undistinguished diplomatic career was at an end, he died in Trieste a forgotten man.

Without any fresh material to draw on, the sole excuse for attempting a new biography of Burton, it seems to me, would have been an inspired analysis of the causes of the transformation of the famous "Ruffian Dick" into a diplomatic nonentity. Hastings has not done this. For him — and for his readers — it remains an unexplained mystery when, in fact, it wasn't a mystery at all as is evident to anyone who has read the Burton literature and bothered to study the social climate of the period.



BURTON . . . grand-scale dreamer

Richard Burton was a victim of his father, a nasty piece of work who, in order to dodge creditors and disapproving relatives, dragged his family from place to place in Europe and North Africa, and compelled his unfortunate wife to find accommodation, attend to all business affairs — and, adding insult to injury, pay for everything by cadging money from her socially-conscious relatives.

Burton senior's sole interests were hunting and whoring and he saw nothing wrong in his children running wild, so in his formative years young Richard cultivated not only an aptitude for languages, but a lifelong taste for cruelty (he used to watch public executions as a form of entertainment) and sexual perversion. Also, like his father, he was constantly on the move and was contemptuous of women.

Not surprisingly, Burton fell foul of everyone he met, not only because he always blamed others for his own shortcomings, but because he had the permanent markings of a child-man who could not face reality. Distance creates longing, and proximity closes horizons. Mecca and Africa were dreams to be entered into, and Richard Burton was a dreamer.

Such an unreliable man could not be taken seriously as an explorer in an age of popular heroes such as Baker, Grant, Stanley and Livingstone. His books failed commercially, largely because they were based on assumptions, but also because his marginalia and voluminous footnotes were more interesting than his texts.

Finally, in old age, he found satisfaction in translating the erotic literature of India, Persia, and Arabia and, ironically, the great explorer's most famous work remains his translation of A 1001 Nights. His wife, excluded from his private thoughts as she had been from his bed, took her revenge after he died by burning his diaries, journals and as many manuscripts as she could lay hands on. So, apart from what is in the public domain, Isobel's completely unreliable biography of her husband and a fragment of Burton's memoirs is all biographers have had to go on.

Why did Hastings tackle such a difficult subject for his first essay in biography? I suspect he got the idea when researching his BBC television series, The Search for the Nile, and that the theatrical Burton appealed to the playwright in him. He must have seen Burton as a character in a play, which he was in a way, but the mistake he has made is in confining his subject to what is virtually a standard prose play in three acts, when the complex, secretive, failure-prone Burton was too unconventional to fit into any theatrical setting but his own.

The book reads well only in the African chapters where the author has taken freely from Alan Moorehead's The White Nile. For the rest, we have a Burton fashioned by Hastings to fit the playwright's conception, and he has conceived Burton as a hero, misunderstood, ill-used, and pathetic, and his wife as a stubborn, clumsy and stupid woman, whereas, in fact, Burton was his own worst enemy and the loyal, sorely-tried Isobel was a saint.

Michael Hastings is very much a modern playwright, which means in his case frequent resort to confusion and shock to keep the audience awake. This can work when the audience is aided by the spoken word, three-dimensional characters, and a visual setting. But only a genius can make it work in literature, and Hastings is no genius.

Burton's room, we are informed, "had a stuffed dark prune drabbet crepuscular about it." Helpful, isn't it? In trying to mock Victorian language style Hastings merely makes a fool of himself and leaves his readers unenlightened.

Here are two further examples of his style: "Her own marriage was no jilt-job." "Dick couldn't have given a fart in a bustle factory whether her mother's feelings were becalmed."

Deliberate abstruseness and lack of taste is the mark of an author who does not know his business, and Michael Hastings, whatever his value as a playwrght might be, clearly has everything to learn about the writing of a biography.

Affirmations of an Ordinary Woman's Strength and Will

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

"Greetings from the ordinary invisible woman," Gwen Hauser writes: "she wasn't what you expected/she wasn't pretty/ and she wasn't warm:/your ordinary woman — is your ordinary thunderstorm:/ the ordinary invisible woman — is your ordinary dyke."

Angry, exultant, hilarious and acidly witty, Hauser's poems in her first collection are exhilarating affirmations of an ordinary woman's strength and will; but unlike so many women whose power is bound in service to "the Man/in every woman's head", this woman's power is serving no one but herself and those of her sisters who share her struggle.

In poem after poem Hauser details the intricate maze of relationships and structures patriarchy has devised to harness women's power. Her poems on working in a factory are particularly sharp as she observes and comments on the place itself and how the workers and bosses within it function.

"Social dynamics of OP 52", where "the 12 million rollers/and sticky ink — are nothing compared/to the social mechanics" is one of the best of these poems.

After an all too familiar exchange with a male worker, Hauser — supported by a work-mate — remains "in my engineers cap/gay buttons/and purple vest/a screaming exclamanation/of everything these men have lobotomized language for" — remains, yes, and ready to carry on the battle.

As Hauser states in another poem, "everybody has to liberate themselves./No one can give anyone liberation:/ men will have to learn to be human beings/support and nuture each other."

Again, responsibility is put where it belongs.

Not surprisingly, some of Hauser's poems are written to women whose collaboration — in thought, word and deed — with their oppressors helps to maintain the entire system of repression.

"You speak of gentleness and sensitivity" Hauser writes to a liberal, "and punch me in the stomach in the next breath — while telling of a friend/you had committed to a mental hospital."

And again, commenting ironically on a relationship: "falling in love with you/was like/being hit/by a bus — /i wasn't killed/but i wouldn't do it again."

In the end, it's the weight and depth of Hauser's celebration of strength — solitary strength, social strength and fantasy strength — that makes her first collection such a delight. Unlike the pallid offerings of most of her contemporaries, Hauser's poems are best read aloud; and when you've declaimed them, shouted them and laughed them, pass them on to a friend.

They will help.

TV Drops Violence

part. Thus, only five of the seasons' new regular series will emanate from ABC. But among them are some fascinating possibilities.

The "big" show of the entire new season, the expensive (7 million for its initial three-hour episode) "Battlestar Galactica" obviously is patterened after "Star Wars." Even the same special-effects expert, John Dykstra, has been recruited to create this one-hour series starring Lorne Greene. Story line is similar to that of "Space 1999" — the search for a planet to lay one's head upon. It promises a great deal — but it remains to be seen whether the home screen is too small for such spectacle.

In the original version of the opening episode, there was a sequence featuring a swinging trio called "the Android Sisters," but executive producer Glen Larsen indicated it would be cut since it was too "campy." So, if the Android Siters remain, you'll know whether "Galactica" will be going the straight science-fiction or fun-fantasy route.

ABC has high hopes for "Taxi" and, basically, what that show has going for it is the Jim Brooks/Ed Weinberger team, largely responsible for "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and other MTM efforts. The new series, bought by ABC without a pilot, concerns the comic-tragic lives of a group of New York City cab drivers. According to Mr. Brooks, all the drivers want to be doing something else; supposedly only the hero, played by Judd Hirsch (another major asset), is satisfied to be a taxi driver. The creators insist that none of the characters wll be stereotypes — and, with their MTM track record, one can hope.

"Mork and Mindy" is the least likely sounding series on anybody's schedule — but it starts out ahead of the game with Gary Marshall ("Happy Days," "Laverne ad Shirley") as producer and an enormously funny comic — Robin Williams — in the lead.

As a spinoff from a "Happy Days" two-hour special, Williams plays a visitor from another planet who sees earth's flaws through extra-terrestrial eyes. Mork talks as if he swallowed a mouthful of helium, is physically unable to laugh, gains weight only in his feet, fall in love with a mannequin . . . etc. Well, you have to be there. As a matter of fact, Mr. Williams might do better with his monologue about the character rather than risk upcoming story lines. Whether or not Mork makes it, you can bet on Williams making it with America's teen-agers.

Total Shutdown By Air Canada

Times News Services

Air Canada, beset by crippling nation-wide wildcat walkouts from a strife-ridden ground workers union, abruptly shut down all operations today for an indefinite period.

The last flights home were 13 planes summoned home from Europe and jammed with travellers who had faced being stranded abroad in the peak summer travel period.

Air Canada president Claude Taylor, who had averted a pilots' walkout only 24 hours earlier, imposed the system-wide suspension before dawn in response to shotgun walkouts Thursday by members of the International Association of Machinists, disgruntled over a second tentative contract.

Prospects of early talks with the divided IAM were confused. A spokesman for the negotiating committee said a previously-scheduled meeting with the airline would proceed Saturday.

But the head of the Montreal local, where most of IAM's 7,500 membership is based, demanded the meeting be cancelled because the union negotiators had lost the confidence of union members.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association on Thursday began to mail ballots o 1,500 Air Canada pilots for a vote on a new contract settlement reached Wednesday.

The ballots are to be returned by Sept. 10 and the results will be announced later that month.

Airline spokesman Jim Standing said in Montreal that the airline was doing its best to make other travel arrangements for passengers booked on Air Canada flights, but "indications from airports across the country are most passengers heard the news and just stayed home."

CP Air spokesman Jim McKeachie said in Vancouver today the airline plans to run some extra flights during the overnight hours.

"We hope to operate some extra sessions on our transcontinental routes to supplement the nine regular cross-Canada flights each day," McKeachie said.

He said the airline's telephone lines were jammed and it had decided to temporarily waive the requirement for international travellers to reconfirm flights from Canada.

Meanwhile, Canada Post spokesman Ray Ducker said mail service in British Columbia will not be greatly affected by the Air Canada shutdown, because first class mail in the B.C. and Yukon district is not normally handled by the airline.

Steve Howe, spokesman for British Airways, said today that the airline will honor Air Canada tickets.

Howe said extra aircraft will not be put on the routes but seats still are available.

He asked that any Air Canada passengers wishing to travel with British Airways get their tickets revalidated before arriving at the airport.

Adding to the chaotic air travel situation, French air traffic controllers began an 11-day work-to-rule slowdown today as thousands of European and North American vacationers started journeys on one of the year's busiest travel weekends.

ELECTION FODDER - CLARK

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government is reducing family allowances for 7.3 million children by more than a third to $20 monthly Jan. 1 but will bring in a tax credit plan for lower and middle-income families, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Thursday.

Chretien, in a hurried, budget-type statement, also said an income supplement paid to 1.3 million elderly pensioners will rise by $20 a month in January and steps will be taken to hold down increases in gasoline and oil prices.

The announcement, part of a series made recently on the heels of a nationally-televised speech by Prime Minister Trudeau Aug. 1, was quickly branded election fodder by Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

Clark, labelling the statement a continuation of a Liberal election campaign, said none of the measures were so urgent they could not have waited for the planned resumption of Parliament in October.

Ed Broadbent, the New Democratic Party leader, said in Hamilton the news conference at which the statement was released was "nothing more than a vivid illustration of the Liberal party's cynical and calculating manipulation of the people."

While welcoming the income increase for the elderly and tax credits to low income groups, Noble said there is little doubt the cutback in family allowance assistance will cost the provincial government.

All children in the care of the superintendant of child welfare such as those in foster homes are partly maintained by the monthly family allowance.

Noble said the only alternative to not making up the $8 difference provincially, would be to reduce their maintenance.

"I don't see how we can do that so it looks like an inevitable cost to the province."

Noble said he hand't worked out how much the short-fall would be.

When asked if cutbacks in UIC might lead to more people going on provincial welfare, Noble said he wasn't yet sure what effects those cutbacks will have.

John Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, said the measures would be a "bitter pill" for middle-income Canadians. But he said he was pleased the government had taken a tough stand on issues that need to be dealt with.

The basic federally-paid allowance is now $25.68 per child a month and, through indexing to the cost of living, would have risen to $28 in January. Quebec and Alberta vary their allowances in accordance with an agreement

Chaos, Conflict For 90 Minutes

OTTAWA (CP) — An hour and a half of confusion, conflicting figures and strident questions from the press followed Finance Minister Jean Chretien's economic statement Thursday night.

The problem was that the minister's six-page statement about cutting expenditures didn't appear to be saving the country any money at all.

Of the three major programs announced, one broke even and two represented net losses to the federal treasury.

Chretien told reporters his scheme for increased benefits to the elderly would cost $290 million, his child benefit scheme would break even and his decision not to increase oil prices as planned next January would mean a loss of revenue of $140 million and the government's decision to reduce the federal excise tax on gasoline by three cents-a-gallon would end up costing $165 million. The total loss came to $595 million.

"How can you pass this off as a spending reduction?" asked a perplexed reporter.

First Chretien told the reporter not to jump to any conclusions until he has unveiled his entire economic program. He promised a second statement within the next week or so.

A second journalist asked a similar question and Chretien told him the government had never meant to convey the impression that the only purpose of its current economic program is to cut expenditures.

"We are re-arranging some of our priorities to help people. It's a question of reorienting our priorities."

A third questioner wanted to know how the government's final balance is supposed to look.

"I recognize there is increased spending in what I've announced tonight," Chretien said. "But some of it is not really spending at all. We do not lose money by offering tax credits. This is simply money we will not be collecting."

Finally, Chretien and his advisers came up with the following summary of the mathematics of Thursday's announcement. The net loss to the government would be $595 million but the net gain through changes in the unemployment insurance scheme would be $580 million.

Unemployed 'Really 13%'

Times News Services

Unemployment in Canada is upwards of 13 per cent — far greater than figures reported by Statistics Canada — the National Council of Welfare says.

And today's unemployment is a mere taste of the crisis in jobs to come in the 1980s, Robert Bryce, former deputy minister of finance, said today.

"There is going to be inexorable pressure from the developing countries to find work for millions of their young people. That's what will strain the market system beyond anything we've seen yet," Bryce told delegates in Ottawa at a three-day conference on the future entitled Shaping the Future: Canada in the Global Society.

The welfare council, in a newly-released report, Working Together, says labor force statistics collected each month by federal government fail to count among the jobless those who, though willing and able to work, have become discouraged and stopped job-hunting.

The "hidden unemployed", many of them poor, unskilled and uneducated, swell the ranks of the jobless to one-and-a-half times the federally-published average of 8.6 per cent for the first six months of 1978, the council says.

The council is a Canada-wide citizens' body formed to advise health and welfare officials.

Bryce said he is not optimistic about Canada's ability to deal with the coming crisis when inflation will continue to strain the market system and domestic unemployment will remain unsolved.

Bryce said the market system on which the economy has been based for the last century faces the severest tests in its history in the next decade.

BATvan Nabs 44

Roving roadblocks operated in the Greater Victoria area Wednesday and Thursday nights have netted police some of their biggest hauls of drinking drivers since the provincial government's Counter-Attack program began nearly a year ago.

Of 1,216 motorists stopped, 44 were found to have been drinking.

Police charged 10 with impaired driving. Three of the drivers were also charged with refusing to provide a breath sample.

In addition, police charged one motorist with driving while his licence was under suspension, three with violations of the Motor Vehicle Act, and one with a violation of the Liquor Control Licensing Act.

The roadblocks, using the government-sponsored BAT-van (Breath Analysis Testing Van), were in the Sidney-Colwood area Wednesday night when 526 vehicles were checked.

Thursday, officers concentrated more in the Colwood-Shawnigan Lake-Sooke areas where they stopped 690 vehicles.

Better Buy Gasoline Now

Service stations in the Greater Victoria area started today to cut gasoline prices in the wake of Finance Minister Jean Chretien's announcement Thursday night of an immediate three-cent cut in the gasoline excise tax.

But don't count on the lower prices staying around too long.

Next Wednesday the prices will go up again from four to five cents a gallon, averaging out about 1.2 cents a gallon more than Thursday's pump price.

Only a scattering of stations had made the price change this morning but all are expected to follow suit before the day is out.

Chretien said the cutback in the excise tax from 10 to seven cents a gallon will cover a three to four cent per gallon hike that will come into effect Sept. 1. That price rise results from an increase of $1 a barrel in crude oil price July 1.

The minister, however, said he would allow oil companies to charge an extra 1.2 cents a gallon to cover higher costs for transportation, marketing and refining.

The excise tax does not cover home-heating oil which is expected to rise next Wednesday by the full 4.2 cents.

Chretien said Thursday the government proposes to skip a similar increase in the price of crude oil scheduled for early next year which would have added a further 3.5 cents a gallon to consumer prices next March 1.

Travel Agents Go Bonkers

Air Canada's totally grounded but Victoria travel agents are up in the air and cursing today as they desperately try again to reroute the flights of hundreds of travellers.

Block-long lineups of people waiting to make alternative arrangements faced travel agents this morning after the suspension of Air Canada operations was announced.

"We're going out of our minds," said Mike Sudal of Travel World.

He said the shutdown is causing tremendous disruptions within the airline industry, as panick-striken people cancel flights, rebook and cancel again.

"Nobody wins in these things, but the airlines are hurting the most," Sudal said.

Air Canada suspended operations after members of the International Association of Machinists walked out at airports in six cities last night.

The travel agencies say they weren't prepared for the possibility of a shutdown and that the threat of a pilots strike earlier in the week was nothing compared to the problems they face now.

A spokesman for BCAA Travel said it will be difficult getting people out of Victoria and estimated a lengthy wait before alternative bookings are available.

He said the company had asked people panicked earlier by the pilot strike threat to wait until the end of the week before making alternate arrangements and now everyone is trying to leave at once.

To people waiting for flights, the shutdown means possible long delays as travel agencies work overtime trying to find alternative flights. Most rerouting is taking place through the U.S.

Hijacking or Hoax? TWA not Sure

GENEVA (AP) — The passengers and crew of a Trans World Airlines jetliner from New York left the plane safely here today after a mysterious seven-hour interlude that authorities said was either a hijacking or a hoax.

The incident began when someone dropped a list of demands into the lap of a sleeping stewardess.

The passengers walked off the Boeing 707 less than an hour before a 5:30 p.m. local time (9:30 a.m. PDT) deadline set by a person or persons calling themselves a "task force of revolutionary soldiers" demanding freedom for former Nazi deputy fuehrer Rudolf Hess, for Robert Kennedy's assassin Sirhan Sirhan and for five jailed Croatian hijackers.

Fontanet first said after the plane landed here that there were "several" hijackers. But he later said no one had seen a hijacker after the 19-page list of bizarre demands was dumped into the sleeping stewardess's lap.

"We would like to find out who placed the messages into the lap of the hostess," said Fontanet after the passengers were taken to a security section of the airport to undergo questioning.

The "task force" had threatened in a written message to blow up the plane by 5:30 p.m. by remote control if the demands were not met.

The demands directed the pilot to take the plane to Cointrin Airport here, the flight's original destination.

Airport officials said there was no reaction among the passengers when the pilot, apparently locked safely in the cockpit, announced over the intercom this afternoon that two negotiators were coming to the plane.

"There was no reaction so the two boarded the plane," one official said. "As things continued to remain quiet, the passengers were told to leave. There was no panicking."

"All 79 passengers and nine crew members are free," said airport spokesman Daniel Tesseyre. There was no word on whether "hijackers" had been apprehended. TWA officials in New York said there were 10 crew members.

Two blue buses took the passengers and crew to the airport terminal, and the airport was closed at 4:30 p.m., apparently as authorities prepared for the possible explosion of bombs said to have been placed in the plane's luggage hold.

Celery, Spuds Lead B.C. Food Price Dip

The price of food in B.C. dropped 1.24 per cent during the past month, the provincial agriculture ministry said Thursday.

The ministry's weekly purchase in Vancouver of a basket of food, consisting of 80 items from 15 food components, showed that the price dropped to $55.83 for the period to July 26 from $56.53 on June 28.

"The decrease is predominantly a result of relatively large declines in the fresh vegetables and beef components," the survey said.

The survey shows that the latest average basket price is 10.7 per cent higher than a year ago and 17 per cent higher than two years ago.

The report notes that fresh vegetables decreased 10.3 per cent over the previous four weeks, with the largest decline registered by celery and potatoes as local produce came on the market.

The fresh vegetable component is almost 25 per cent higher than a year ago, the survey says.

Fresh fruit dropped one per cent while beef declined 5.6 per cent mainly due to heavy promotion by the retail stores.

"Retail prices will remain higher for several months as cattle herds are rebuilt, and long-term significant price reductions are not expected until the early 1980s."

Beef prices are currently 34.5 per cent higher than they were a year ago "but from 1974 to 1977 beef prices actually saw no increases." Pork is up six per cent from a year ago.

Eggs dropped 1.3 per cent because of store promotions while cereals and breads increased because of higher prices for flour and breakfast cereals, the survey says.

MAN WALKS FROM U.K. TO FRANCE

CALAIS, France (Reuter) — A U.S. Army sergeant became the first person to walk across the English Channel today — with the aid of a giant "water shoe" he invented.

Sergeant Walter Robinson, 31, covered the 40-kilometre stretch from Dover, England, to Calais in 11.5 hours. Robinson, from Tampa, Fla., had predicted his walk over water would take him eight hours.

INQUEST

An inquest into the death of six-year-old Jessie Robert Day has been set for Wednesday, Aug. 30, at 7:30 p.m.

WEATHER COOLS OFF FOREST FIRE THREAT

Cooler temperatures and rain during the past week have reduced the forest-fire danger ratings to low over most of B.C., says D. H. Owen, B.C. forest service protection officer.

He said in a press release Thursday that the over-all fire situation is well under control.

Owen added that there were 14 new fires during the week, and that of the 2,187 so far this year, 61 were still burning but were in the mopping-up stage.

Canada's Trade Picture Remains Red-and-White

OTTAWA (CP) — There was a $98-million trade deficit in July as both exports and imports rose from the previous month, preliminary figures from Statistics Canada show today.

Revised figures for June showed that the merchandise trade balance that month actually showed a surplus of $38 million. Preliminary figures had indicated a $93-million deficit, the first since November, 1976.

The value of exports in July was $4.04 billion, an increase from of 2.6 per cent from June.

Imports, however, increased faster at a rate of 6.1 per cent to $4.14 billion.

The relatively weak merchandise trade performance of the last two months contrasts with strong surpluses registered in the first five months of the year. Federal authorities were hoping those surpluses would help provide a major impetus for economic growth.

In the three months ending in April, for example, there was a singularly high surplus of $1.31 billion, Statistics Canada said. The total 1977 surplus in merchandise trade was $2.9 billion.

There were widespread declines in exports of a broad range of commodities in July, led by a substantial fall in shipments of metallic ores due to prolonged industrial disputes at the Quebec-Labrador iron mines.

Shipments of passenger vehicles and fertilizers were among the few exceptions to the trend.

On the import side, there was an increase of nearly 10 per cent in imports of passenger vehicles and automotive parts from the U.S. in July. That was partly offset by a decrease in imports of machinery, trucks and other equipment.

Imports from the U.S. were up 1.3 per cent to $2.93 billion. Imports from other countries, however, ballooned by 22.5 per cent to $1.22 billion and were led by unusually-large landings of crude oil.

U.S. Dollar Up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar edged up on the world's foreign exchanges today, aided by a report the United States is ready to draw on about $4.4 billion in credit from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to support the sagging U.S. currency.

The price of gold was lower.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 192.052 Japanese yen, the high point for the day, up from 191.65 yen at Thursday's close and a low of 189.20 yen earlier today.

The U.S. dollar closed Thursday in Montreal at $1.1392 in terms of Canadian funds, up 1-10.

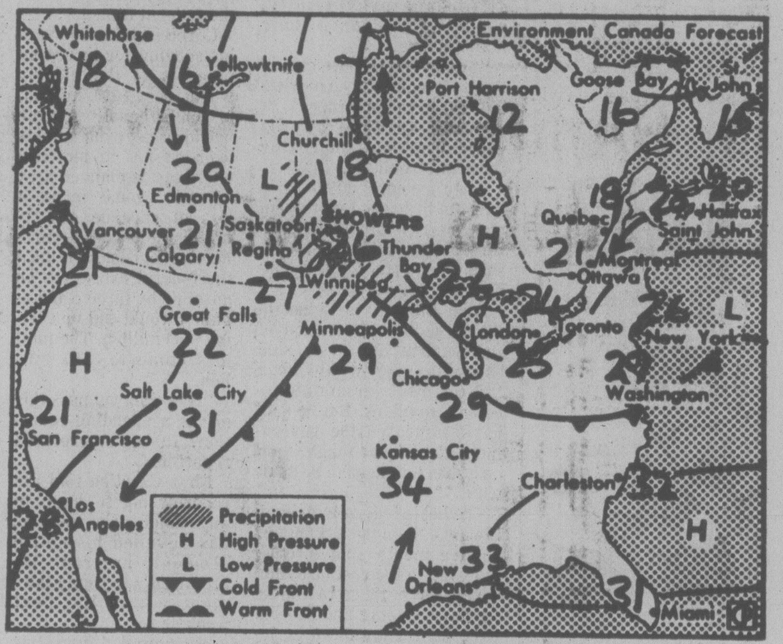

Map valid until noon Saturday

A large cold low pressure area remains off the west coast maintaining the unseasonably cool wet weather that the province has endured for the past two weeks. Bands of cloud spiralling around the low continue to produce intermittent showers and clear breaks and on Thursday evening one band resulted in an awesome display in the Lower Mainland. Characterized by the tubular streamers of grey cloud radiating out of its pitch black base the intense thundershower common in the Interior and in most parts of Canada is a somewhat rare phenomenon in Vancouver. Frequent flashes of lightning from cloud to ground were blurred by the pounding rain that accompanied it while the enormous electrical energy reached the ground repeatedly. Numerous power outages occurred as puny man-made electrical devices exploded under the assault of nature's incredible ionic avalanche. The end of the display was as serene as the beginning was violent as a crack in the sky between the cloud base and the horizon opened to reveal a crimson sphere which transformed the cloud from ominous grey to peaceful pink.

Boss Says 'No Big Deal'

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

You sense something different about the Bank of Montreal branch at Shelbourne and Pear.

You look around. A teller smiles at you. The young woman looking after accounts peers at you inquisitively. A secretary seeing you looking somewhat lost approaches.

"Who would you like to see?"

"The bank manager."

You are escorted to a small office and only when you are face to face with the manager does it dawn on you why you felt the bank seemed different from other others in Victoria . . . it's a totally female-staffed bank, probably the first and only one in British Columbia.

"Let me assure it isn't so by design," says manager Joan Firkins.

When she took over the branch office in January, she found herself in charge of a staff of 13 women. It has remained so.

She explains that when former manager Richard Hill was moved to the bank's credit division in Vancouver, a male trainee was also transferred at the same time.

"It just happened that way," she says.

How did the bank's customers react to dealing with an all-female staff?

Firkins says it has made no difference, but adds there were a few male customers at first who seemed somewhat surprised. But they all accepted the change.

"One man walked in here and asked to see the manager," she explained.

"He was shown into my office and we began to talk. After a while, he asked again to see the manager. I told him I was the manager.

"There was silence . . . a pause. 'Oh!,' he said, 'I thought you were the loan manager.' I explained that Mr. Hill had been transferred. After a few minutes the ice was broken and all went well."

Firkins says being a women and holding a bank managers job is "no big deal."

"I'm not here because I'm a woman," she said. "I'm here because I can do the job. That's the way it should be with all jobs. Sex, color or creed should not come into it."

Firkins said most jobs in banks today are held by woman because men usually study and train to go directly into management. There is no sex discrimination in the employment of personnel.

"Another factor is that many women who were former bank employees are returning to work in banks for various reasons," she said.

"They are married, have raised a family, and want to return to work. Banks employ them because they are experienced."

She said most women bank managers have come up the hard way, starting at the bottom and working their way through different positions into administration.

"On the other hand, most men go directly into management after training," she said.

"This gives women an edge over men. They get to know all the facets of the operation."

Firkins has had plenty of experience. She has been 17 years with the bank.She managed the Westwood Mall at Port Coquitlam before coming to Victoria.

"Are women more manageable than men"?

"That's a hard one to answer,"she replied."I have had no trouble managing men".

Half a Council Faster than One

Victoria city council probably set a speed record Thursday afternoon, racing through its usually interminable agenda in an hour flat.

Council meetings of four hours or more are the norm.

But Thursday's event was a mostly harmonious affair with hardly a single sour note sounded as 38 items were dealt with in quick succession.

The reason?

Mass absenteeism. Away, for various reasons, were Mayor Mike Young and aldermen Larry Ryan, Bob Wright, and Murray Glazier.

He was right. There were six media representatives present, as well as five city hall staffers, and three people in the public gallery. Two members of the public left about the half-way mark.

At one point Hayes rose to support a motion that council meetings be held at 7:30 p.m. for the next four months, starting in September.

"Our public turn-outs at these afternoon meetings have been quite pathetic," he said turning to look at the rows of empty chairs.

"No offence to you," he hurridly added when the lone woman in the galleries blushed.

Council agreed to the night meetings without debate and then continued to rattle through with the rest of the business.

The only sign of discord came when council endorsed a report calling for a committee to standardize commercial and industrial development by-laws in the Greater Victoria region.

That amounted to an endorsation of continued bureaucratic growth at the regional government level, a sore point with some aldermen.

Hayes, who has often said the Capital Regional Board should be phased-out, protested the move.

But aldermen Ron McKenzie and Robin Blencoe disagreed, saying that regional government was the way to go in the future.

McKenzie said the regional district should be strengthened, and somewhere down the road the four municipal governments should be disbanded.

Said McKenzie with a smile: "We (city council) have been here more than 100 years; maybe it's time we moved on and gave birth to something else."

What would normally have been a bitter and wearisomely protracted debate lasted less than ten minutes and nary a scowl was exchanged.

In other business council:

—Heard from traffic committee chairman Ald. Bill McElroy that new truck routes would soon be proposed for James Bay and that recommendations to curtail the competitive and "vulture-like" nature of Victoria tow-away operations would soon be forthcoming.

—Endorsed in principle the concept of an annual beer garden on the Inner Harbor (without naming any possible operator).

—Passed seven bylaws that complete a downzoning of much of James Bay.

—Dealt with a number of zoning matters, including rejection of an application by Terrick Enterprises Ltd. to build a shopping mall and apartments at 1006 Russell St.

As the meeting wrapped up Blencoe looked at the clock and did a double take. It was only 3 p.m.

"Amazing," he said.

STORY GARBAGE —NIELSEN

A grossly distorted story that appeared in a local morning newspaper, today performed a great disservice to the Cowichan Estuary Task Force, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said.

The news story reported the task force has recommended there be no further industrial development on the estuary, that Nieslen had rejected the recommendation and that the task force would have to keep meeting until its findings became acceptable to the minister.

Calling the story a bunch of garbage, Nielsen said the newspaper's informant "simply doesn't know anything."

The minister said the newspaper was obviously only reporting what it had been told but "it's unfortunate as hell it was not even moderately verified."

Nielsen said the task force has been doing a pretty good job and for anyone to suggest it is a mere facade performs a disservice to those involved in the study.

The task force is an investigative body that will file its report, when it's completed, to the Environment and Land Use Committee (ELUC).

That committee makes the decisions — not the minister of environment alone, Nielsen said.

The ELUC is comprised of nine cabinet ministers.

Commenting on the same news report, task force member North Cowichan Ald. Graham Bruce said: "It's a complete fabrication."

Bruce said the task force report isn't due until Sept. 20.

The morning newspaper said the report had been completed, reviewed by Nielsen and sent back for revisement.

Bruce said that as far as he knew the minister had been kept up to date on the progress of the report — but had never received any preliminary drafts.

Saanich Must Weigh Profits, Environment

Saanich will reap financial gain from the proposed Interurban Road industrial site but the negative impact on the environment will be much greater than if it was built in Royal Oak, Saanich has been told.

In an impact assessment study released Thursday, council has been informed that the Interurban site has 23 causes that make it less than desirable for industrial development.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said today, "I'm happy with the fact that everything is up front. There are no facets being hidden.

"I want people to bear down on us. I want dialogue and input from the community."

He said the study had been greater in depth than the one done on the Royal Oak site and industrial development at Royal Oak would also have produced negative aspects.

The report warns tillable and potentially tillable agricultural land will be developed, the Mann Avenue extension could cause increased traffic through residential neighborhoods and the site is 2.5 and 2.75 miles from existing highways.

Interurban traffic volumes are expected to grow 300 per cent, development will dominate the landscape, the site will not satisfy firms' wishes for good highway access, and development will take place on land zoned for protection, conservation and recreation, the report warns.

Couvelier said the site is approximately 157.7 acres. Of this, only 88.3 acres would be developed. The remainder is flood plain or high rocky land suitable for lookout parks.

The report, however, says industrialization will be a negative deviation from the characteristic landscape, replacing highly-valed landscapes with low-valued ones. The residential quality of the area will be lowered.

It is estimated Saanich will make a 57.5 per cent profit on land sales — $2.73 million — with an average annual profit of $470,000.

But current road costs exclude much that was recommended by the consultant, says the report, and no onsite runoff retention, reduction or filtration is being planned.

The proposed Roy-Vanalman east-west road would increase traffic through Northridge and need construction of a Vanalman-Pat Bay interchange to be effective.

The report warns rural-seeking residents will be aleniated by the development and says the site is less desirable than Royal Oak and the relative degree of change in land use is greater than in a developed area.

Valuable Garry oak, easter liies, Douglas fir and Oregon grape forests will be infringed upon, the study states, and runoff from the site will be greatly increased, magnifying flood danger.

It adds that most tenants will be firms relocated from elsewhere in the region.

On the positive side, the report estimates about 1,130 jobs will be provided with a multiplied payroll of $33.42 million annually. Some firms may be saved from leaving the region and property tax revenues will be $353.775 annually, providing a 2.9 per cent general revenue increase.

A spokesman for the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said today Saanich council should immediately reconsider developing the Royal Oak site as an industrial park.

Cedric Steel, head of the Chamber's economic development committee, said, "We's always considered the Royal Oak site to be the best one and it's been in the planning stage for 16 years.

"We're wondering why it took so much time to look for alternative sites.

Portland Isle Trail Started

A parks summer youth crew has completed about one-third of a proposed trail around the perimeter of Princess Margaret Marine Park on Portland Island, about four miles north of Sidney.

The crew, 20 youths age 15 and 16, mostly from the Interior, was disbanded today after completing several park projects under a provincial summer youth employment program.

Don Carruthers, district park superintendent, said the trail skirting the bluffs of the Portland will be completed next year.

Existing trails, such as the one through the centre of the island, were heavily used by boating people who anchored off the island or camped in the park during the summer months, he said.

"They are popular attractions," he said.

The crew also slashed out a trail in Beaumont Marine Park on Pender Island, he said.

Other projects included the cleaning and marking of all marine buoys at marine parks, the building of a retaining wall at Bamberton Park and tidying up and improving park facilities in general.

Carruthers said visitor attendance at marine parks was up.

Seniors 'Pay for Sewers'

A lawyer claimed Thursday that elderly and fixed-income residents of Ganges face lifelong payment for a sewage system to subsidize land speculation in the Saltspring Island community.

Ian Waddell made the comment in Vancouver before Justice H. A. Callaghan in seeking a B.C. Supreme Court injunction to halt any further expenditure of public money on a sewage system he claimed was illegally authorized by the Pollution Control Board.

The petitioners, Yvette Valcourt, Lionel Wood and Fred Sibley, all of Ganges, are claiming a court declaration in an action to be held in October that the decision of W. N. Venables, director of the Pollution Control Branch, directing the Capital Regional District to install a sanitary sewage collectional and disposal system at Ganges, be set aside as invalid.

Justice Callaghan reserved decision on Waddell's application and on preliminary objections against the applications by William Pearce, representing the director of pollution control and Brian Smith, for the regional district.

Waddell's application, made under the Judicial Review Procedure Act, seeks to halt further expenditure of a $376,000 fund, of which $103,000 has already been spent for design costs and incidental expenses reletive to the $2.2 million sewage system.

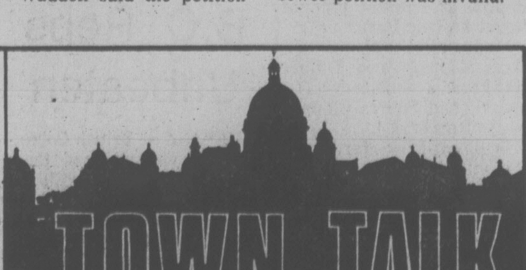
The system would serve about 365 property owners in the Gulf Island community.

Waddell said that in August, 1977, Dennis Young, director of the Capital Regional District, circulated a petition under the Municipal Act to build a sewage system and later claimed that the required 66⅔ vote had been achieved and that the program would proceed.

Waddell said the petitioners who fought the action found numerous irregularities — including unauthorized signatures, and single signatures for jointly-held properties.

He said that after corrections the affirmative vote was 47.31 per cent and that the summary of votes prepared by Young himself showed only 58 per cent affirmative.

The residents opposed to the sewer then retained legal counsel and issued a writ in the Victoria registry of the B.C. Supreme Court seeking a declaration that the Ganges sewer petition was invalid.



Wanted: Cockatoo Called Joe

Hey, you with the Cockatoo, bring it back!

In the first place, burglar, the bird will be hard to fence. And since he's temperamental and prone to quit eating, he may well die.

She doesn't care about the radio but Joe's a rare bird indeed and she'd like him back.

There's a reward of $100. So if you know of anybody who's suddenly acquired a white Cockatoo, a call to Mrs. Lowry at 595-2612 might pay off.

Sharp, a senior citizen, and his wife Agnes last year began planning a holiday in Montreal and made reservations in November for a June flight on Air Canada through the B.C. Auto Association.

Sharp paid for the $502 return flight with his American Express card but May 1 Sharp's wife was hospitalized.

He returned the tickets May 15 and two days later, BCAA issued a credit voucher to Air Canada, who sent the money to the American Express people about June 28.

Sharp is still waiting. American Express in Toronto say they can't issue a cheque until they find the documents although Sharp says he has all the documents and has sent photostats of them to Toronto.

The American Express card. It lets people know who's missing almost $500.

People living in the Gordon Head area couldn't believe their eyes Wednesday when instead of plying her usual route between Seattle and Victoria, they saw the Princess Marguerite steaming up Haro Strait.

It was no lapse of navigation.

She was on charter to the 12th Congress of Universities of the Commonwealth, which has been meeting at the University of British Columbia.

For some of the 1,000 aboard it was a trip down memory lane when they boarded her at the Canadian Pacific Railway dock in Vancover and she took the same route to Victoria as she did when she was a CPR vessel.

Among those smitten with a case of nostalgia was Dr. Bob Wallace, chancellor of the University of Victoria.

The Princess Marguerite resumed her regular run on Thursday.

Too many Cooks, even in Captain Cook's bicentennial year, can spoil the broth for an admirer of the famous mariner's somewhat less famous contemporary.

Retired Times reader Ted Roberts, 1189 Clovelly Terrace, points out that an article on the Provincial Museum last week incorrectly referred to the museum's naval history exhibit as a replica of the stern of Cook's ship Discovery.

Not so, according to Roberts, the vessel is supposed to be Captain George Vancouver's Discovery.

Roberts, a knowledgeable student of the life and exploits of Captain Vancouver, and a consultant in the construction of the exhibit, graciously says the mistake is commonly made — even by historians who should know better.

Talk about late dates.

The booking agency says the late show time is because of restricted theatre availability.

Restricted theatre availability for Ray Charles?

Would the Queen travel via Greyhound?

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market reversed a mid-session decline to rise fractionally in active mid-afternoon trading.

The TSE 300 index edged up 0.4 to 1,234.15, encouraged by a two-point advance at New York.

Dome Petroleum Ltd. climbed 2¼ to $75¼ on the sale of 36,126 shares following its announcement that indications of hydrocarbon zones have been found during deepening of a Beaufort Sea well.

Westburne International gained 1¼ to $37, Canadian Pacific Investments ⅞ to $23¾, Maritime Electric A ¾ to $12½ and Simcoe Erie Investors ¾ to $8½.

Home Oil A dropped 1 to $41½, Home Oil B 1 to $39, Canadian Tire A ⅞ to $26⅜, Crush International ⅝ to $12⅞ and Pacific Petroleums ⅝ to $37⅝.

Canada Tungsten Mining rose ¾ to $20½, Cyprus Anvil Mining ¼ to $8⅞ and Teck Corp. B ¼ to $7¼. Conwest Exploration slipped ¼ to $6¾ and Kerr Addison Mines A ⅛ to $13¾.

Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum advanced 1 to $37½, Ranger Oil Canada ¾ to $18 and Trinity Resources 45 cents to $4.50. PanCanadian Petroleum declined 1⅛ to $35½ and Ocelot Industries B 1 to $14.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market climbed on moderate trading volume today showing little response to statements about the dollar and inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which was off a fraction in early trading, recovered to post a gain of 1.99 to 899.34 by 2 p.m.

Overall gaining issues outnumber losers by a 7-to-6 margin.

In response to a published report, Assistant Treasury Secretary Fred Bergsten said the United States was considering using its International Monetary Fund reserve resources to support the dollar but had reached no policy decision and was also considering other steps. The dollar has fallen steeply against major world currencies on foreign exchange markets in recent weeks.

Ramada Inn, up ¾ to $10¼, topped the NYSE most active list as of 2 p.m.

Other actively traded issues included Pan American, down ⅜ to $8½; Flintkote, off 2¾ to $36½; and Winnebago up ⅞ to $6⅛.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Heavy-volume issues achieved marginal early gains but declined suddenly in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. F.C.A. International moved up 10 cents to $3.10 and Northern Telecom 1 to $36⅝, following the latter firm's declaration Thursday of a regular quarterly dividend of 18 cents a share. Aquitaine Canada lost ¼ to $19¾; Shell Canada ¼ to $15, Imperial Oil A ⅛ to $21¾, Simpsons Sears ⅛ to $7½, Massey-Ferguson ⅛ to $11⅜, Canadian Cellulose ¼ to $8 and Pacific Petroleums 1½ to $37. Among speculative issues, Dynamic Mining Exploration rose three cents to $1.45 on a turnover of 16,200 shares.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices moved moderately higher near the close of light trading on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 3.8 to 513.1 an hour before the close. Leading industrials and oil issues gained, while gold stocks declined with the drop in the international bullion price. Canadian shares softened.

Gold

Engineers Healthy

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Unemployment among Canada's professional engineers is low despite a rush of foreign engineers into the country, M.N. Patterson, president of the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, reports.

"Latest figures show that actual unemployment among professional engineers in Canada now stands at 0.5 per cent, which is pretty well an irreducable minimum," he said in a speech to a service club.

He said a recent study shows that imports of engineers in research and development "have increased substantially."
